TIAA/CREF Contributions Suspended for Tiers 2-3-4

State Comptroller Edward V. Regan has suspended state contributions to TIAA/CREF retirement plan on behalf of employees in Tiers 2, 3 and 4 (those hired after 1973) in SUNY, CUNY, the State Education Department and the Statutory Colleges at Cornell University.

The suspension began with the paycheck dated January 15. It affects 178 employees on the SUNY Plattsburgh payroll. It does not affect 117 others here who are enrolled in Tier 1 of TIAA/CREF.

A memo to SUNY presidents from University Counsel Sanford Levine attempts to clarify the matter, as follows:

"Since last spring the comptroller has been concerned about a possible conflict between the Retirement and Social Security Law and the Education Law on the level of the state's contribution to the Optional Retirement Program (ORP)."

In the (last) session of the Legislature a bill was passed ... to maintain ORP contribution rates at their present levels through 1993. That bill was vetoed by Governor Cuomo ..."

Mid-year Admissions Goal Topped; Minorities Account for 10.4%

The college will exceed its January enrollment goal, and the mid-year figure for admission of ethnic minorities appears encouraging.

According to Richard Higgins, director of admissions, the college had set a spring semester enrollment target of 300 first-time freshmen and transfers and students who have been readmitted. However, deposits have been received from 378 applicants. Considering the "no-show" factor and the certainty that the number of new students who choose to study on a part-time basis will increase, Higgins expects the January enrollment yield will be between 310 and 330 students.

Deposits have been received from 24 freshmen, 241 transfers and 113 students who applied for readmission. The numbers are at par with those for January in recent years. But applications for spring term admission increased by 10.7 percent in 1991 in comparison with the previous year — to 1,268 this past fall from 1,145 in 1990 — with some positive results, particularly in respect to transfer admission, where the acceptance versus application ratio indicates higher selectivity.

"We are pleased with the progress being made in keeping with the college's commitment to increase its multicultural population," Higgins said. "Our records show that 10.4 percent of freshmen and transfer students admitted in January report they are from ethnic minority backgrounds."

Admissions Sets 'Special Weekends'

The admissions office has scheduled four special weekends this semester to host prospective students. The first three will be directed to encourage applications from members of specific groups. Faculty and staff who expect to participate in one or more are asked to make note of the weekends on their calendars.

Academic Dismissal Rate Continues Decline

Dismissals for academic reasons continue to decline, reflecting again the positive impact of a policy implemented two years ago as well as a realization among students that they must maintain prescribed standards.

The initial fall semester 1991 dismissal list included the names of 230 students expelled for academic deficiency, a number down from 239 a year ago and 384 in 1989. Forty of 125 students who appealed for reinstatement for the spring semester 1992 will be allowed to continue. That compares with an appeal success rate of 58 of 152 last year and 140 of 268 two years ago.

"We believe the decline in dismissals can be attributed to two factors — the tougher, well-defined policy and a growing awareness among students that they must meet the expectations of the faculty," commented Suzanne Daley, coordinator of academic advisement and coordinator of the academic review process. "The message obviously is getting through."

The policy, Daley added, was enacted to raise academic standards and to motivate students to improve their academic per- (Continued on next page)

Self-Study Nears Completion; Visitation Team Named

Preparations for the visit by the Middle States Re-Accreditation Team, scheduled for April 12-15, are continuing, according to Dr. John Myers, chair of the Self-Study Committee. Myers said this week that the final Self-Study Report is almost completed.

Over the last two months, Myers said, the self-study committee has reviewed all of the comments made during the open hearings held in November and incorporated into the report those comments and suggestions felt to be appropriate. He added that the committee had also responded to several comments and suggestions made by Dr. Catherine Gira, who chairs the re-accreditation team, during her visit to campus last semester.

The list of members of the re-accreditation team has been received and includes: Gira; Richard J. Ambacher Jr., former chair and professor of communications at Glassboro State College, NJ; Pamela M. Bischoff, vice president of Ramapo College of New Jersey; Virginia M. Crowe, dean of library and media services, Shippensburg University, PA; and Frank S. Davis Jr., professor of computer and information services, Bloomsburg University of PA.

Also, Helen S. Lepke, associate provost and academic vice president, Clarion University of PA; Julius L. Mack, professor of chemistry, University of the District of Columbia; Stanley N. Miller, professor emeritus of social science and education, the Pennsylvania State University at Harrisburg; and Julie K. Phelps, vice president for business and finance, Delaware State College.

DEC Teleconference Scheduled

The New York State Department of Environmental Conservation will present a teleconference titled "Proposed Regulations for Low-Level Radioactive Waste Disposal Facilities" on Wednesday, Feb. 5 from 7-9 p.m. in room 202 of Yokum Hall.

DEC staff will provide an overview of the proposed regulatory requirements, recently released, and the accompanying environmental impact statement. The program is free and open to all. For more information, contact Kate Chilton in CAS (3054).

opinion from the Attorney General on whether the statutes mandate a linkage between the current lower employer contributions to the Employee Retirement System/Teacher Retirement System and the level of contributions for ORP members in the three affected Tiers.

"The Attorney General

concluded that there was a linkage," writes Levine, "but that the contribution level could not be computed on a single year basis. The comptroller, claiming to be unable to determine what contribution to continue, apparently (then) decided to stop making any contribution for Tier 2, 3 and 4 members."

The SUNY counsel concluded by emphasizing that "SUNY is attempting to work with the Governor's Office, the City University, employee organizations and other parties to address this problem in a rational manner."

Meanwhile, SUNY Chancellor D. Bruce Johnstone has protested the action in strongly worded terms. In a letter to Regan, the chancellor expresses disbelief that the comptroller "would condone such an extraordinary action that would affect the retirement plans of thousands of employees," declaring "astonishment," also, that the action would be taken without consultation with the leaders of the affected state agencies.

"Precipitating a crisis by refusing to make the usual payment will only incite the justifiable wrath of thousands of employees ... and an inevitable rash of legal actions," Johnstone continued.

"The only way to resolve the problem is to initiate immediate discussion... since any solution will require approval from all interested parties."

SUNY Plattsburgh President Charles O. Warren expressed total support with the chancellor's position and for any effort that will resolve the matter. He vowed to communicate immediately — by memo, E-mail and Weekly, if that manner of reporting is timely — any and all developments as they occur.

readmission procedure. The numbers, he said, are typical, but they should not be interpreted to mean that even a majority of those allowed to return were dismissed originally because of academic deficiencies.

"Two-thirds of our readmits are students who have solid academic records but who dropped out for any of a number of reasons," he said. "The remainder were dismissed for academic reasons, but they have since demonstrated they can succeed here by achieving good grades at other institutions."

formance. Students whose grade point average falls below 2.0 are subject to dismissal, but the policy does allow new students whose g.p.a.'s are in the 1.6 to 1.99 range to submit a formal plan describing in detail their strategies for achieving at least a 2.0 average by the end of the spring semester. If the plan is accepted, the students are offered academic probation.

Daley said 153 students qualify for this type of probation this semester. That number, too, is down from a year ago and the year before that when 166 and 184 students, respectively, returned on probation.

Center Publishes Second Volume in 'Focus Canada' Series

SUNY Plattsburgh's Center for the Study of Canada has published a second volume of monographs about Canada in its "Focus Canada" series, and the latest book features several chapters authored by Plattsburgh scholars.

The new publication is titled The Canada-U.S. Relationship: Global and Regional Dimensions, and its topics range from an analysis of Canada and Japanese direct investment in the U.S. to a regional case-study of cross border shopping.

It follows Reflections from the Past: Perspectives on Canada and on the Canada-U.S. Relationship, a commemorative volume — issued last fall, just prior to the Center for the Study of Canada's Silver Anniversary celebration — based on "interesting and (still) relevant" papers presented 25 years ago at a Canadian-American institute held on the Plattsburgh campus.

In a variety of ways, said Dr. Richard Beach, director of the Center, the first volume is a tribute to Canada's past and to the past of the Canadian studies program here. The latest, he added, "presents a contemporary view of the economic relationship between the two countries from the perspective of leading economists on both sides of the border."

Quebec Premier Robert Bourassa, who writes about the trade of hydro power between his province and the U.S., is among seven Canadians whose work appears in the book.

The five SUNY Plattsburgh faculty contributors, and the titles of their articles, are: Dr. Nancy Church, associate professor of marketing, "Selling by Gender in Canada and the United States: A Cross Cultural Analysis of Advertisements in Macleans and Newsweek"; James Csipak, assistant professor of marketing, "Retailing South of the Border: The Case of Quebec Shoppers in Plattsburgh, New York"; Dr.

Warren Dixon, professor of economics, "Energy Across the Border: The American Northeast and Quebec's Water Power;" Dr. Prem Gandhi, professor of economics and Dean of the School of Business and Economics, "The Free Trade Agreement Revisited: Appraisal for New York State;" and Dr. Lise Heroux, assistant professor of marketing, "Marketing Research in Quebec: The Agenda for the 1990s."

Volumes in the "Focus Canada" series are available through the Center for the Study of Canada, 133 Court St., Plattsburgh, N.Y. 12901 (ext. 2086).

Showcase '92 Taking Shape; Initiatives to Spark Attendance

A bigger and better "Showcase" for demonstrating the scholarly and creative pursuits of the college community this spring is taking shape. However, students, faculty and staff who intend to participate have less than a month to submit plans for their projects and presentations.

Showcase '92 is scheduled for Wednesday, April 8, but, says Anna Nardelli, associate professor of education and coordinator of this year's day-long event, abstracts are due on or before Friday, February 21. Abstract forms, she added, are available to those who don't now have them from any of 26 committee members (listed below) who collectively represent all areas of the campus.

Last spring's third annual Showcase featured a record 121 presentations — a record Nardelli is certain will fall. She feels that some new initiatives will serve to energize the 1992 celebration.

"We're working on a 'community college connection,'" says Nardelli, "whereby we are encouraging faculty and students from regional two-year institutions to keep April 8th open for a visit to campus and Showcase. Also, a sub-committee is making contact with area high school teachers to invite them and their students to see what we are all about.

Moreover, Showcase this year will have a strong international emphasis. Faculty and staff and student sub-groups of the Council for International Initiatives are planning a variety of programs and activities having an international focus."

Showcase depends entirely on volunteer participation, with classes suspended the day of the event to encourage maximum participation. It typically consists of symposia, lectures, exhibits, poster displays and formal and informal performances and demonstrations.

Persons who need abstract forms or more information about the program and deadlines are urged to contact their liaisons. The Showcase committee consists of Francis Barber (maintenance and operations); Anna Battigelli (English); Bette Brohel (life-long learning); Lil Cassidy (academic affairs); Alice Champagne (nursing); Kate Chilton (CAS); Dennis Doyle (college relations); J. Scott Hewitt (teacher education); Mark Kaiser (accounting); Jeanne Kissner (Canadian studies); Ingrun Lafleur (academic affairs); William Laundry (campus life); Ken McDonnell and Laurie McDonnell (Student Association); Rick Mikkleson (art); Henry Morlock (psychology); Faten Moussa (business and economics); Kevin Mundy (media services); Mary Murphy (ODK-campus life); Anna Nardelli (teacher education); Michael Oliver (human resources); Eldridge Roark (student affairs); Roger Sandwick (chemistry), Douglas Skopp (history), Marie Winterkorn (nursing); and Melanie Wyand (campus life).

Council Meets Jan. 29

The SUNY Plattsburgh College Council will hold its next regular meeting on Wednesday, Jan. 29 at 3 p.m. in the Alumni Conference Room, Hawkins Hall. Besides reports from Council liaisons to various areas of the college, the agenda includes a discussion of items covered at a recent meeting of SUNY's Association of Councils and Trustees.

Salute to Unbeaten 56 Team Highlights Basketball Reunion

Members of the 1955-56 Cardinal basketball team, which had the only undefeated season in the college's history, will be the honored guests this weekend during the Annual Basketball Weekend.

Coach Joe Jastrab, nine players and the widow of a tenth will be on hand for the festivities. They are Tom Giroux, Dick Jamison, Mike Kukie, Joe Langworthy, John Luke, Irv McLaren, Jim Merrill, Jim Mills, Howard Swan and Mrs. Mary Humiston (widow of John Humiston). The other two members of the team, Murray "Pops" Bullock and Francis Arthur, are deceased.

Several of the members of that championship team will join other Cardinal alumni for an alumni game on Saturday afternoon at 4 in Memorial Hall. Other returning former players include Tim Bond, Tom Cummings (a member of the Cardinal Sports Hall of Fame), Kirk Eskild, Paul Heiner, Tom Herkenham, Todd Kiernan, Ron Konowicz, Tom Lacy, Matt Moore, Mike O'Connor, Tim Penix, Brian Shea, Don Verkey and Mark Whyte. Bob Garrow and John Longware, also members of the Hall of Fame, will serve as honorary coaches.

The weekend events begin Friday evening as the Cards take on New Paltz State and end on Saturday with the Cards hosting SUNYAC rival Oneonta State. During the 8 p.m. game on Saturday, a ceremony will be held honoring Jastrab and the undefeated championship team. Members of the Cardinal Booster Club and the Plattsburgh College Foundation's Century Club are invited to attend post-game receptions following each game.

Clarkson Puts End to Cards' 17-Game Unbeaten Streak

The Plattsburgh State hockey team's unbeaten streak came to an end Monday in Potsdam in a 6-2 loss to perennial NCAA Division I power Clarkson. But the never-quit Cardinals gave the Golden Knights all they wanted for the better part of the contest, rallying from a 3-0 deficit early in the third period on goals by Shawn O'Malley and John Peron to close the gap to one before their hosts broke the game open with three unanswered markers. Sophomore goaltender Mike Mondello performed brilliantly for the Cards, stopping 36 Clarkson shots on net, many from point-blank range. Plattsburgh, now 16-1-1 on the season, defeated Ryerson, RIT and Brockport State handily during the winter break and continues as the top ranked team in the nation among Division III schools.

The men's basketball team, meanwhile, fell from the ranks of the undefeated last weekend with back-to-back losses at home to SUNY conference rivals Binghamton and Cortland. The Colonials snapped the Cards' 10-game skein Friday, 68-57, and Cortland's Red Dragons followed suit on Saturday winning a 82-77 decision.

The Cardinal women split their weekend games with Binghamton and Cortland. They whipped the Colonials, 71-55, but endured a 77-35 pounding from the women Dragons.

Mundy, Duquette Assume New Roles on Library Staff

Feinberg Library staff members Kevin Mundy and Kenneth Duquette have taken on new responsibilities, effective Jan. 1.

Mundy has assumed duties as SUNYSAT coordinator, an assignment held by Duquette over the past two years. The shift of SUNYSAT responsibilities, states Cerise Oberman, director of libraries, will provide for a more integrated approach to the library's media services program.

Duquette, meanwhile, has a new role related to the library's automated system. He will serve as primary backup to the automation system's administrator and will also be responsible for all aspects of the "report generation module."

The module, Oberman, says, is an integral part of the system and will provide for pre-formatted and custom designed date reports.

Duquette will also expand his microcomputer coordination responsibilities to include all equipment related to the library automation project.

Armstrong, DeVita Break New Ground with 'Distant Mirrors'

When they study or otherwise make judgments about foreign cultures, most Americans tend to form opinions and draw conclusions on the other peoples. Drs. James Armstrong and Philip DeVita, associate professor and professor of anthropology, respectively, are co-editors of Distant Mirrors: Foreign Reflections on American Culture, a book to be published next fall by Wadsworth Publishing Company, Belmont, Calif.

"We always seem to judge other cultures by comparing them to our own," DeVita declared. "Our book consists of essays by 15 social scientists from all parts of the world.

"The contributors," DeVita continued, "are anthropologists, sociologists and experts in behavior, psychology and other fields. They are insightful scholars who have lived in the United States for a time and who agreed to share their impressions of American culture by comparing it with their own and how they were brought up. Armstrong and I think we may have broken new ground with this book."

The authors of the essays that appear in Distant Mirrors come from places such as China, Poland, Belgium, Thailand, Portugal, Switzerland, and Nigeria. The second chapter in the book, DeVita said, was written by Dr. Jin Kim, associate professor of communication at SUNY Plattsburgh, whose homeland is Korea.

The book is the first collaborative effort between Armstrong and DeVita. But when it appears in November it will become the latter's third in three years — and DeVita recently signed a contract for a fourth, a text in cultural anthropology, set for publication in 1994, in which the author will examine "yesterday, today and tomorrow ... where we came from, where we are, and where we're going in our global village."

Phi Epsilon Chi's Privileges Suspended

Phi Epsilon Chi fraternity has been notified by college officials that its privilege to function as a fraternity at SUNY Plattsburgh has been suspended for the remainder of the current semester through the fall 1992 term.

The action stems from a series of incidents that occurred reportedly during a fraternity banquet held the evening of Nov. 19, 1991 at Howard Johnson's Restaurant on Route 3 in Plattsburgh, and a follow-up investigation by an ad hoc committee composed of college students, faculty and professional staff.

Members of the committee interviewed some fraternity members. They reviewed information provided by state police, who were called to the restaurant at one point in the evening; by Howard Johnson's employees, including two who complained in writing; and by an individual who attended a private function at the restaurant in a room adjacent to the fraternity activity.

STATE UNIVERSITY OF NEW YORK

Exhibit by the Late John Bolles Opens Next Week in Myers

An exhibition of sculpture and oil pastel drawings by the late John Bolles titled "Phase I: The New York City Years, 1982-1989" will open Wednesday (Feb. 5) in the SUNY Plattsburgh Art Museum's Myers Gallery and continue through March 3.

A 4 to 6:30 p.m. public reception in the Gallery will mark Wednesday's opening.

The exhibition will serve to introduce the work of Bolles, a Plattsburgh native, to the college and the community. A large collection of his art has been deeded to the Plattsburgh College Foundation for the college's permanent art collection by Bolles' parents, Otto and Edith Bolles of 6 Holland Avenue in Plattsburgh, who have also created a fund to organize and present the work. Aspects of the collection will become part of the Museum Without Walls program, and the college will maintain archives of the artist's life and work.

John Bolles began his art studies at SUNY Plattsburgh but finished the bachelor's degree at the University Center at Buffalo. He received the

M.F.A. in 1970 from the Tyler School of Art at Temple University, then began a career that included teaching at the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts in Philadelphia as well as developing his own art.

Bolles had many exhibitions in the eastern U.S. from the mid 1960s through the late 1980s, and his work is included today in many notable collections in the U.S. and abroad. In 1989 he received three important awards which highlighted his emergence as a significant American artist: The Adolph and Esther Gottlieb Foundation grant and the Pollock-Krasner Foundation grant and the First Prize Solo Exhibition in national competition at the Pindar Gallery.

Prior to his death in 1990, Bolles was named a sculpture fellow by the New York Foundation for the Arts.

Campus Mourns Death of Robbins, 52

William E. Robbins, professor of art and a member of the SUNY Plattsburgh faculty for more than 23 years, died at his home in Plattsburgh Saturday (Jan. 25) following a lengthy illness. He was 52.

Robbins taught painting and drawing at the college and he was a past chairperson of the art department. He was known as an accomplished and prolific artist in both media.

"Bill Robbins was truly a caring and supportive teacher, insightful and perceptive artist, and a loyal, loving friend," commented SUNY Plattsburgh President Charles O. Warren. "Hundreds of students grew and excelled because of his steady and nurturing guidance, and all matured in wisdom, understanding and strength of heart. His unique mosaic of wit, ideas, ideals and unyielding strength enriched our community, and gave it substance and reality, hope and vision."

Robbins was born on January 9, 1940 in Lemons, Mo. He received the bachelor's degree in 1963 from the University of Northern Iowa and earned the master's degree and master of fine arts degree from the University of Iowa in 1967 and 1968, respectively.

He joined the SUNY Plattsburgh faculty as an instructor of art in September of 1968. He was promoted to assistant professor in 1971, to associate professor three years later, and to the rank of full professor in 1983.

Robbins is survived by his wife, the former Pamela Milley, three sons, Christopher, of Indianapolis, Ind., and Joseph and Justin, both of Plattsburgh, his parents, Fernice and Hazel (Lessy) Robbins of Waverly, Iowa, three brothers, and several aunts, uncles, nieces and nephews.

Contributions in his memory may be made to Hospice or to the William E. Robbins Memorial Scholarship Fund, in care of the Plattsburgh College Foundation.

In the meantime, he has become that publishing company's series editor in anthropology. That means, he said, that he will have final approval of all future Wadsworth publications in the discipline and that he will have responsibility for writing the general introduction to all future anthropology series published by the company.

According to Dr. Eldridge W. Roark Jr., vice president for student affairs, the committee found that the fraternity's conduct "totally exceeded the bounds of accepted civility," and it noted also the absence of responsible fraternity leadership during the event. The committee's judgment, he said, together with a review of two prior episodes of misbehavior involving members of Phi Epsilon Chi, produced the decision to impose the suspension. "This college," he added, does not and will not tolerate abusive and inappropriate behavior by individuals or groups.

Roark has notified the fraternity that restoration of privileges "will not be automatic but will involve a careful analysis of (the) fraternity and its potential to function in a manner that is acceptable to the college community." When and if the suspension is lifted, Roark added, the fraternity will be on probation for an additional year with special conditions designated at that time.

Phi Epsilon Chi is housed at 72 Broad Street in Plattsburgh.

Senior Malvese Receives Teke Foundation's Reagan Award

SUNY Plattsburgh senior Matthew Malvese has been named the recipient of the 1992 Ronald Reagan Leadership Award presented by the Teke Educational Foundation of Tau Kappa Epsilon (TKE) Fraternity.

The award, the only one given this year by the national Greek leadership fraternity, carries with it a cash prize of $1,000. It is named for President Reagan in recognition of his role as president and pledge master of TKE while a student at Eureka College.

Malvese will be honored formally next month — in recognition of the "talent and hard work ... and significant contributions to the interfraternity and campus community" that led to his selection for the award — at a regional leadership conference of fraternity members to be held in Boston.

To qualify for the honor, Malvese had to submit a 90-page application whose contents included his academic record, several letters of recommendation and six essays. The latter included three describing his accomplishments in service to his fraternity, to the Student Association and to the greater community, respectively, and another detailing his goals in life.

Malvese, a business management major from South Huntington, pointed out that his fraternity consists of more than 15,000 members attending 300 chapters at colleges and universities in the United States and Canada. He has been a member of TKE since the spring of 1989 and he serves currently as its president.

He notes proudly that TKE has won the college's President's Cup, signifying achievement of the highest standards in community service in the previous year, in each of the past three years.

Last fall, Malvese was among ten students selected nationwide to receive the fraternity's "Top Teke" honor, also conferred by the TEKE Educational Foundation. That award acknowledged his standing among the fraternity's top undergraduates nationally in terms of "contributions to scholarship, leadership, community" and his chapter.

On campus, Malvese was voted "Most Valuable Brother" this past year by members of TKE's Sigma Gamma chapter here, and he received the fraternity's "Most Outstanding TKE Award." He has served as Student Association vice president for finances, SA senator pro-tem, and as business manager for Cardinal Points, the student newspaper, and he was recently nominated for Who's Who Among Students in American Colleges and Universities.

Admission Advisory Group Formed; Given Program Orientation

A broadly representative Ad Hoc Admissions Advisory Group has been formed on campus to "strengthen existing bridges with academic departments and centers in matters that pertain to future student recruitment initiatives."

The 20-member group met initially last Friday at the Educational Conference Center at Valcour, and it will be convened at least monthly during the regular academic year to review progress and to suggest specific strategies or programs to be initiated over the next two years. The group will be advisory to the director of admissions and the president of the college. It will meet next at 7:30 a.m. on Feb. 28 in the Angell Center Centennial Room.

According to Richard Higgins, director of admissions, last week's first session focused on three areas. The first consisted of an overview of the status of enrollments, including an update on fall 1991 and tentative new student enrollments for the semester just underway. The second examined enrollment plans in relationship to the college's mission and its commitment to attract a wide range of students from diverse backgrounds, and the third consisted of an orientation to the duties and responsibilities of the admissions staff.

The latter topic, Higgins explained, covered generally understood activities such as recruitment travel, correspondence, student interviews, applications review and transfer credit evaluation.

It also highlighted the involvement of admissions personnel in managing or participating in a variety of projects. Those projects range from the peer recruitment and tour guide programs to admissions publications review and special events, including Spring Open House and weekend visits by special groups of prospec-

Members of the admissions advisory group are: Kenneth Adams, Center for Earth and Environmental Science; Julius Archibald, computer science; Bruce Butterfield, English; Joseph Bodenrader, mathematics; Diane Fine, art; William Graziadei, biological sciences; Carrie Harris, Center for Human Resources; Carla Hendrix, Feinberg Library; Jeanne Kissner, Center for the Study of Canada; and Stephen Light, sociology.

Also, Peter Luguri, physical education, athletics and recreational sports; Edward Miller, chemistry; Albert Montanaro, communication; Marilyn Morton, nursing; David Mowry, honors program; Anna Nardelli, Center for Teacher Education; Craig Sample, foreign languages and literature; Lary Shaffer, psychology; Douglas Skopp, history; and Robert Withington, economics.

SEFA Drive Ends Successfully; Campus Giving Totals $36,147

The campus drive for support for the State Employees Federated Appeal is over officially, and campaign co-leaders Clara LaRose and John Homburger are declaring it a success.

Contributions to the 1992 SEFA appeal from all college-affiliated employees total $36,147. The breakdown shows that 330 participating state employees gave $31,721 and that a $500 donation by the Marriott Corporation, supplemented by gifts from 224 personnel employed by College Auxiliary Services, Marriott Food Services (including students) or the Research Foundation, added the remaining $4,426 to the total.

"We closed the books at the end of the fall semester," said LaRose, "but that doesn't mean we won't accept and process contributions from faculty and staff who misplaced or filed away their donor cards, or who may not have been contacted personally and asked to make a gift. We'd love to hear from those people."

LaRose noted that SEFA contributions from state employees have risen in each of the past three years. The increase in the past year equalled 8.5 percent, she said, adding, "That's encouraging considering the state of the economy."

SUNY Plattsburgh should retain its position at the top among the more than 15 North Country agencies that support SEFA. However, LaRose said, the college community is far from realizing its giving potential. "We surpassed $31,000 with gifts from 330 employees," she said. "Can you imagine the grand total if the remainder of our 842 full-and part-time faculty and staff participated ... even at the level of $1 every pay period?"

Nevertheless, there were several campaign highlights — circumstances that made heading it worthwhile for LaRose and Homburger. One was counting gifts from areas of the college that achieved 100 percent participation, and they included the EOP Office; the Office of the Dean of Professional Studies; and staff in Affirmative Action; Duplicating Services; Purchasing; Payroll, Budget and Finance; and College Relations and Development.

A second, LaRose said, was the response of the staff in Maintenance and Operations, where gifts totaled $1,977 and participation increased by 75 percent. "We made a special effort to acquaint personnel in Maintenance and Operations with the truly valuable services that SEFA agencies, particularly the Clinton County United Way, provide to their friends, neighbors, colleagues and even members of their own families," LaRose said.

"The strategy obviously worked," she added.

Lecture Features Politician Who Almost Toppled Jesse Helms

Harvey Gantt, the charismatic and articulate North Carolina politician and businessman who waged a valiant but unsuccessful bid to unseat incumbent conservative Jesse Helms in his state's hotly contested U.S. Senate race in 1990, will give a public lecture at SUNY Plattsburgh next Wednesday (Feb. 5).

The talk by Gantt, on the topic "Today's Vision for Tomorrow's Hope," will be at 8 p.m. in Giltz Auditorium in Hawkins Hall, and admission is free. The event is part of the "Presidents' Speakers Series" sponsored jointly by the offices of the presidents of the college, the Student Association and College Auxiliary Services.

A two-term mayor of Charlotte, Gantt made history in becoming North Carolina's first black senatorial candidate. In an ordinary off-presidential year election, the votes garnered by Gantt might have been sufficient to unseat Helms. But Helms's eleventh hour fear campaign mobilized an unprecedented voter turnout, sealing his victory but vaulting his opponent into the national limelight.

A native of South Carolina, Gantt attended Iowa State University, then transferred to Clemson University, becoming the first black student admitted to that institution. He graduated from Clemson with honors in 1965 and later earned a master's degree in city planning from MIT. He is an architect by profession, and co-founder of the award-winning firm of Gantt and Huberman Architects.

'Unbeaten 55-56 Cardinal Cagers Honored

Several members of the college's undefeated 1955-56 Cardinal basketball team returned to campus last weekend for the Annual Basketball Alumni Weekend. They joined other former basketball 'greats' for an afternoon game against each other, cheered the current Cards on to two important SUNYAC victories (against New Paltz and Oneonta), and renewed old friendships. During Saturday's Oneonta game, the members of the 1955-56 team were presented with plaques honoring their achievements. Seen here are: (seated, l. to r.) Ivo MacLaren, Mike Kukie, Joe Langworthy, and Tom Giroux and (standing, l. to r.) Bob Garrow, who coached the 1955-56 junior varsity team, Dick Jamison, Jim Merrill, Jim Mills, John Luke, and Coach Joe Jastrab. Not shown but also in attendance for the weekend events were Howard Swan and Mrs. Mary Humiston, widow of John Humiston.

Campus Public Safety Officers Authorized to Carry Capstun

Public safety officers at SUNY Plattsburgh have been authorized to carry "Capstun," a mace-like substance used by law enforcement personnel to control potentially harmful people and restrain them from harming others.

Permission to bear the substance—made up of 90 different hot peppers held in a three-inch container—was recommended by the College Council and has been granted by President Charles O. Warren.

The Council and the president gave their support to the measure following consultation with the President's Committee on Personal Safety and in consideration of a study conducted by an ad hoc committee of the Student Association.

The 10-member student committee, chaired by SA Senator Lawrence Condon, was formed to investigate public safety's use of Capstun from the perspective of students. The study, conducted over an eight-week period, focused on circumstances in which Capstun may be used, the (current) overall safety of the campus, and students' knowledge and understanding of the duties and responsibilities of public safety officers. According to the ad hoc committee report, information gleaned from personnel now empowered to carry it had the greatest impact on the students' decision to endorse use of the substance when circumstances war-

Low Damage in Dorms Shows Responsible Student Conduct

(Editor's note: An announcement at last week's College Council meeting that room rent for students will increase moderately effective next fall (see related item, next page) was overshadowed by other aspects of a report from the Division of Student Affairs. According to data compiled for the fall 1991 semester, campus residence hall occupants are taking good care of their surroundings. Moreover, resident assistants are performing admirably — in the classroom and on the job. This is the first installment in a two-part series on the substance of the report.)

It's no accident that SUNY Plattsburgh students pay less to live on campus than their counterparts at other University institutions.

Their own attitude and behavior, combined with excellent supervison and first-rate work by a responsive janitorial staff, add up to an important factor in institutional efforts to keep room costs down.

A report from the Campus Life Office indicates that damage to the college's twelve residence halls during the fall 1991 semester in 61 separate incidents cost $2,413.62 to repair. That breaks down to a cost of 23 cents per student and 1.3 damage incidents per residence hall per month.

"This is a remarkable record," said William Laundry, director of the Office of Campus Life, who noted that costs for repairs are passed on to students in room rent charges.

"It certainly seems to reflect responsible conduct of students in residence halls, excellent supervision by campus life and residence hall staff, and superb performance by a janitorial staff that is conscientious and takes pride in its work.

"Even more pleasing is that the low damage level for the most recent semester is not inconsistent with those reported semester-by-semester over

Perhaps you haven't noticed, but Weekly has a new masthead at the top of the page. This is the third issue incorporating the new design and logotype, and the credit for the newsletter's fresh look belongs to student Saul Ferrer. Senior English-journalism major Ferrer is currently serving a second semester internship in the college's Office of College Relations and Development under the supervision of Sherwood Keyser, director of publications.

Room Rent Increase Approved; Still Lowest Rate in SUNY

President Charles O. Warren has approved a recommendation to increase residence hall room rates at SUNY Plattsburgh by $25 per semester, effective with the beginning of the 1992-93 academic year.

The increase will bring academic year room costs to $2,100. The rates during the current year are the lowest of all SUNY residential campuses, and Plattsburgh expects to continue as the best bargain for on-campus housing in the University in 1992-93.

Room rates by campus for the coming year are not available yet. But even if they remain the same at SUNY's residential campuses as they are now — a circumstance that is not only unlikely but absurd according to William Laundry, director of campus life — Plattsburgh would still rank no higher than second from the bottom in room rent charges.

Laundry said the decision to ask for the increase came following a consultation procedure involving the Council of Residence Hall Presidents and the president and vice president of the Student Association. With campus dorms operating on a self-supporting basis, a variety of considerations entered into the rate-adjustment scenario.

Income from room rent pays for all residence hall expenses, Laundry explained. That includes all aspects of maintenance, utilities, debt service payments and building improvements. The latter in recent years have included lettering for building names, painting, the acquisition of new furniture and carpeting and installation of the "scrambler" security lock system on outside doors of eight residence halls.

Improvements and building needs are very much a part of the process that produces room rate increases. For example, said Laundry, the latest increase will make possible 13 separate projects ranging from installation of or improvement in fire alarm systems, lighting, entrance and interior doors, stair treads, and mailboxes.

What contributes to Plattsburgh's status as the least costly residential campus? "The community's low utility rates help a great deal," said Laundry, "and our costs for repair and upkeep are moderate in comparison with other campuses.

"Also," he added, "we have a lean staff. I don't want to give the impression that we feel we're understaffed. Rather, our organization is 'flat.' Residence hall personnel report directly to our office; they don't have to contend with two or three layers of bureaucracy."

the past several years."

Laundry doesn't attempt to explain it, but, he said, SUNY Plattsburgh students collectively take care of their rooms and dorms with a pride virtually akin to ownership. He knows from years of experience in campus life administration that few colleges can match Plattsburgh's record in this regard.

Episodes of deliberate destruction occur occasionally, he said, but just as often they happen accidentally. The fall term summary shows that $264.28 was collected from students. Besides compensation from a few students caught in the act of destroying campus property, the amount includes some revenue taken in from residents who could have dodged responsibility for damages but turned themselves in and paid restitution.

"We make every effort to provide a clean, warm, comfortable and brightly-lit living environment for our students," Laundry said. "This college seems to attract the type of student who appreciates the style of living we offer and respects the rights of others."

Because it is composed of hot pepper, Capstun, unlike mace, a chemical, is biodegradable. Campus public safety officers will wear the Capstun receptacle on their belts. It holds two ounces of the substance, providing up to 93 sprays per container with an average spray distance of six feet.

When sprayed, the subject's eyes sting and tear and nasal passages are blocked, causing the subject to fall to the ground where the officer can more safely handle the situation. Its effects, which last up to 40 minutes, can be treated by flushing the eyes with water or by facing the subject into the wind. It has proven 100 percent effective in not producing lasting side effects. Capstun does not harm those wearing contact lenses.

Campus public safety officers welcomed the Council action and President Warren's decision to allow them to carry it in accordance with policies developed by Richard Boas, director of public safety. Boas said the authority to use Capstun actually serves to diminish the possibility of injury to either public safety officers or the persons they are attempting to subdue.

"In situations where the need to control potentially violent persons is evident," Boas said, "officers are trained to observe a procedure whereby their presence is perceived as the initial deterrent, followed by voice control, then the application of hands and then, as a last resort, the use of the baton. What may be overlooked is the fact that the baton ... more commonly known as 'billy club' ... is a deadly weapon."

"Capstun gives us an instrument for control that in most situations will preclude the use of the baton. It will enable officers to control violent persons without concern for harming them or themselves."

DeVries, Cotter Reassigned to Office of Analysis and Assessment

The college's Office of Analysis and Assessment (OAA), formerly the institutional records and research office, has been revitalized with a change in duties and responsibilities of two long-time members of the staff.

Gordon DeVries and Marlyn Cotter have been reassigned to the office from previous positions they held with the Technical Assistance Center. DeVries had been director of information services for TAC, and Cotter had held the post as information processing specialist.

According to John Homburger, senior business officer, the reassignment supports a recommendation by an ad hoc committee formed to review the needs for college-wide analysis and assessment activity — a function that had been reduced by gradual attrition to a one-person operation. That person, he said, is Jean Kibler,

"... who adds outstanding expertise and many years of experience to the mission of the new office."

OAA's services include analysis of information — for example, overall and program enrollment data, new student profiles, student-faculty ratios, undergraduate attrition, and student academic progress — collected by surveys and other means for internal use, such as for budgeting and planning, and for reports required by SUNY and other state and federal agencies.

"The committee came to the conclusion that the records and research office should be reconstituted," said Homburger, "and our response has been to augment staffing in OAA by reallocating the TAC positions held formerly by DeVries and Cotter. The recent alignment of TAC with the Institute for International Business, Education, Research and Training in the School of Business and Economics made the timing right for change. With resources on the decline, the need for accurate and comprehensive data not only intensifies ... it becomes fundamental to the process of achieving well-informed decisions in a timely manner."

DeVries brings expertise to his new role in both data file management and analysis and computing skills, Homburger said. He will continue to provide support to TAC for various projects that require census and demographic data. Cotter will provide general services to the office, but will be called upon as needed to provide assistance with financial reports required by TAC and to help with other tasks in the Office of Business Affairs.

OAA is located on the third floor of the Kehoe Administration Building.

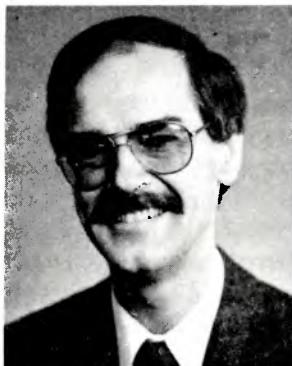

Book Beat: Bedworth on Health Education; Pryse on Women Writers

Release of The Profession and Practice of Health Education, a textbook published by Wm. C. Brown Publishers, demonstrates that scholarship runs deep in the Bedworth family.

Co-authors of the book — termed a "precursory effort that recognizes the scope of vital health issues, the potential for prevention, the role of education and the need to deal with health problems within the context of the entire health care system" — are the father-and-son team of Albert and David Bedworth. The senior Bedworth is the former acting chief and associate, Bureau of Health Education and Services, New York State Education Department, while Dr. David Bedworth is associate professor in the college's Center for Teacher Education.

In the preface, the authors describe their book as a basic text for training health educators; one that emphasizes the promotion of health and the prevention of disease, disability and premature death. It establishes a basis for a sound but flexible philosophy around which health education practices are implemented and adaptable to new conditions, and it is "intended to stimulate thought and debate regarding what is presently known about health education and what future trends might be."

SUNY Plattsburgh's Dr. Marjorie Pryse is co-editor of American Women Regionalists, 1850-1910, a 672-page textbook hailed by its publisher, W.W. Norton & Company of New York, as "a groundbreaking anthology."

The work, according to a promotional brochure from Norton, "makes available for the first time an extension of regionalist fiction by American women writers. The selections — 64 stories by 14 authors — enable readers to reconstruct a women's tradition of sketches and short stories from its origins, as early as Harriet Beecher Stowe's first published sketch, to its coda, in the work of Willa Cather."

"Together, these writers offer a new perspective on regionalism that crosses boundaries of geography and ethnicity with works by New Englanders Mary E. Wilkins Freeman and Sarah Orne Jewett, Tennessean Mary Noailles Murfree, New Orleans writers Kate Chopin and Alice Dunbar-Nelson, Native American Zitkala-Sa, and Western writers Sui Sin Far and Mary Austin, among others."

The Profession and Practice of Health Education is organized into three major parts related to philosophy, psychosocial perspectives and school/community relations. The first part discusses the specifics of health education philosophy, primary definitions associated with health, education and health education, factors that affect health education, and the foundation of health education and its primary goals and practices.

Part II emphasizes the relation of human needs to health, how health contributes to human effectiveness, the principles of leaning as a basis for health education processes, and the role of human motivation in health promotion. The third part focuses on the practice of health education, building on the philosophy and principles covered in the previous two main sections of the book.

David Bedworth, coordinator of health education at the college, has been a member of the SUNY Plattsburgh faculty since 1979. He holds the Ph.D. from the University of Illinois (1976).

Canadian Studies Center Sponsoring 'Low-cost' Field Trip to Ottawa

The college's Center for the Study of Canada is sponsoring what it terms "a low-cost" field trip to Ottawa, Ont. during that city's celebrated winter carnival weekend on Feb. 14-16, and members of the campus community are welcome to make the trip on a space-available basis.

The itinerary includes guided tours of the National Art Gallery, Ottawa itself and Carleton University. Travelers will have plenty of free time to shop, to attend Winterlude events, to visit the acclaimed Museum of Civilization, to skate on the Rideau Canal, reputed to be the "longest skating rink in the world," and to explore the day- and night-life of the city.

A coach bus will depart the Center, 133 Court Street, on Friday morning (Feb. 14) and return to campus late in the afternoon on Sunday. Club Canada members will be given priority travel status, but organizers anticipate that plenty of room will be available for non-members. For the full itinerary, information about prices and accommodations, and for reservations, telephone (ext. 2086) or stop by the Center.

Foundation Reports Another Banner Year in 1991

The Plattsburgh College Foundation had one of its most successful years to date in 1991, raising a total of $680,140.32 from 5,285 individuals, businesses, and organizations (a record high number of contributors). The good news was announced on Thursday (Feb. 6) during the annual meeting of the Foundation held at the Angell College Center.

Foundation President Curtis E. Shipman said, "Considering the state of the economy, we were understandably apprehensive at the start of our campaign. However, we are elated at the results. Obviously, alumni, faculty and staff, area businesses and organizations, and even parents of current students, realized our increasing need for private support. Their response to that need, particularly this year, is nothing short of incredible."

SUNY Plattsburgh President Charles O. Warren echoed Shipman's sentiments, saying, "This college is deeply indebted to each and every one of our many friends who so generously shared their resources to make SUNY Plattsburgh a better place. Their faith in our mission and our stewardship not only helps us meet immediate and pressing needs such as increased financial assistance for our students, but also gives us strength and courage as we face a future filled with challenges."

Don Garrant, executive director of the Foundation, announced the results of the various segments of the overall campaign. "The Annual Giving Campaign," he said, "raised a record total of $434,597.30. Almost $90,000 was contributed to various endowment funds held with the college. In addition, we received three substantial bequests during the year. They came from the estates of the late J. Leonard Douglas ('21), Michael W. Murray ('75) and Ellen Smeallie Squire ('60), and combined they totaled $83,103.

"Perhaps the best news," he continued, "was the fact that the Centennial Endowment Campaign, begun in 1989 to raise $500,000 to meet future needs of the college, surpassed its goal this past year, with two more years to go before it ends. Gifts totaling $72,511.40 in 1991 brought the campaign total to $534,913, with many pledges scheduled to be completed within the next two years."

Clifford Calongne, chair of the Annual Giving Campaign, outlined the results of the various drives within that campaign, noting that, once again, alumni of the college led the way with contributions of $152,716, followed closely by the Business Campaign which raised $122,856. He commented, "Both totals are remarkable

New Scholarship Fund Honors Shipman

Curtis E. Shipman, president of the SUNY Plattsburgh College Foundation since 1986 and recently retired president and chief executive officer of Keeseville National Bank, received an unexpected honor from the Foundation and his bank's parent company at the Foundation's annual meeting last Thursday.

During the meeting, William G. Bitner III, president of Evergreen Banks, and Charles O. Warren, president of SUNY Plattsburgh, jointly announced the creation of the Curtis

E. Shipman Scholarship Endowment Fund. With an initial value of $50,000, the fund will support a scholarship equal to full tuition and fees at SUNY Plattsburgh.

The scholarship will be presented annually to an undergraduate in the School of Business and Economics whose career interests lie in the banking industry "and whose attitude, ability, integrity and concern for others and for the greater good of community and society reflect Curtis Shipman's exemplary work ethic, high moral principles and human values." The recipient will be known as the Shipman Scholar.

Bitner commented, "Evergreen Bancorp is honored to be able to work with the SUNY Plattsburgh Foundation in the establishment of the scholarship endowment to recognize one of Evergreen's best known and highly regarded administrators. Curt Platts-

He continued, noting that income from organizations (primarily service clubs and fraternal organizations) increased by 90 percent over 1990 totals. Parents of students also continued to increase their private support, with 995 parents contributing $32,761, up nearly 5 percent over last year's total. Additionally, contributions from faculty and staff, foundations and trusts, friends in the community, and supporters of the Cardinal Booster Club all increased substantially.

Several gifts of art works, books and other items of personal property were also received this year, including a substantial number of paintings and sculptures created by the late John Bolles, a former Plattsburgh native, and deeded to the college by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Otto Bolles of Plattsburgh.

In closing the meeting, Shipman thanked the many Foundation volunteers, commenting, "Everyone involved with the Foundation can be very proud of these results. A great many people volunteered their time and made outstanding efforts to ensure a successful campaign. I am very proud to be associated with the Foundation and its people."

Warren added, "In many ways, Curt Shipman has led an extraordinary life. One feature is that, although he was never a student at SUNY Plattsburgh, he has given freely of his time, creativity and resources for many years to serve our current and future students. His leadership has been both compassionate and visionary. His caring, his kindness and his dedication are indeed extraordinary."

Shipman, who continues to serve as chairman of the board of Keeseville National Bank, has been affiliated with the Foundation for many years, serving as vice president for five and chairing its annual giving program for four before assuming the presidency. For his efforts, he received the college's Distinguished Service Award in 1989 and was cited as a person who "by action and example, (has) guided the development of the Foundation to its status as a leading asset of the institution," and as one whose "...contributions to the college will endure for all time."

Shipman has been with Keeseville National Bank since 1981. Previously, he served Marine Midland Bank for 14 years, rising through the ranks to become regional vice president. He is a past president of both the Plattsburgh and Clinton County Chamber of Commerce and the Clinton County Area Development Corporation. He continues to serve on the Board of Directors of the Area Development Corporation and is also treasurer of the CVPH Medical Center's Board of Directors.

Professor Emeritus Joseph Hennessey Dies at 71

Joseph L. Hennessey, 71, professor emeritus of sculpture at the college, died

Joseph Hennessey

Monday, Feb. 3 at his winter home in Phoenix, Ariz. following a brief illness.

A native of the Bronx, Mr. Hennessey graduated from the Cooper Union in 1951; earned the bachelor's degree in art education from NYU in 1952; and received the M.F.A. in sculpture in 1954 from Cranbrook Academy of Art, Bloomfield Hills, Mich.

Mr. Hennessey joined the faculty here in 1954 as an assistant professor. He was promoted to associate professor in 1963 and to full professor in 1969. He retired in 1985.

Mr. Hennessey chaired the art department for several years and also served as acting director of the college's art galleries. His work was exhibited in numerous regional and national shows and his commissioned works are held in many public and private collections.

President Charles O. Warren commented, "Joe Hennessey was a very important and central part of our art program through a very important period of its growth and development. He approached his colleagues, his students and his art with dedication and sensitivity."

Mr. Hennessey was active with the John XXIII College Community Parish for many years, and he created the sculptor of the altar piece at the church. He is survived by four children, Nora Lanigan of Saranac Lake; Lisa H. Italiano of Waitsville, VT; Lawrence J. Hennessey of Fort Collins, Colo.; and Susan R. Staples of Winooski, VT; and by a sister and three grandchildren.

Residence Staff Achieve Academically; Rate High Among Peers

(Editor's note: A report from the Division of Student Affairs to the College Council at the Council's January meeting was highlighted by a Campus Life Office account of the occurrence of only minor damage in campus residence halls and of the academic and job performance of resident assistants. Last week's first installment in this two-part series focused on how students are taking good care of their surrounding. The series concludes with this assessment of how residence staff measure up academically and for leadership.)

Residence Directors and Resident Assistants at SUNY Plattsburgh are unmistakably among the busiest people on campus. They must be able to demonstrate they are "a cut above" the average student inside and outside the classroom merely to survive the screening and selection process. Once on the job, they are expected to maintain their grades while serving as friends and keepers-of-the-peace, counselors and disciplinarians, ombudsmen and program planners.

Their supervisors in the Office of Campus Life keep close tabs on them, and the most recent analysis of how the college's 104 residence staff (12 directors and 94 R.A.s) are meeting their responsibilities to themselves and their peers contains some impressive information.

Academic data for the fall 1991 semester indicate that residence staff as a whole achieved a mean grade point average of 3.33. Seventy-three in the group had averages above 3.0, while 35 compiled a gpa above 3.5. Five (Paul Berry, Amanda Jankowski, Mike Markham, Deirdre Markle and Katrina Washburn) achieved perfect 4.0 averages, and another eight (Amy Goi, Del Hart, Melissa Jenkins, Dave Kocsis, Amy Mellen, Angela Morin, Robert Schofield and Nikki St. Mary) had gpa's (rounded off) between 3.9 and 3.94.

The overall semester average for residence staff collectively in fall 1991 increased by nearly a point in comparison with last fall, and it is the highest in the last five years.

On another measure, peer evaluation, residence staff are clearly doing a commendable job. More than 1,250 of 1,500 dorm residents in the survey sample returned questionnaires distributed during the latter part of October that asked a series of questions relative to the effectiveness, helpfulness, accessibility, knowledge and other leadership characteristics of their R.A.s. Some of the findings:

- Asked if rules and regulations are enforced, 93 percent of the respondents agreed or strongly agreed.
- Asked if their floor can be characterized as having an atmosphere of mutual respect among residents, 95 percent agreed or strongly agreed.
- Asked if it is usually too noisy on their floor, 84 percent disagreed or strongly disagreed.
- Asked if R.A.s are knowledgeable about facilities, services and procedures on campus or are helpful in obtaining information about them, 91 agreed or strongly agreed.

- Asked if R.A.s have attempted to get to know them, 90 percent agreed or strongly agreed that such an attempt had been made.

Some other perceptions: 79 percent of respondents agreed that R.A.s had both organized social and recreational activities and had made residents aware of educational and cultural programs on campus; 81 percent reported that R.A.s conduct floor meetings regularly; and 94 percent responded that the discipline system and campus rules were satisfactorily explained to them.

Lifelong Learning Gets Grant to Fund Social Services Employees' Training

The SUNY Plattsburgh Center for Lifelong Learning has received a grant totaling $33,894 from the New York State Department of Social Services to administer a training project for employees of the Clinton County Department of Social Services.

The project is designed to enhance job-related skills, knowledge and competencies among the county social services department's professionals and para-professionals, and to contribute to building staff morale and reducing staff turnover. Elizabeth Pasti, acting director of the Center at the college, is director of the project for a contract period through calendar 1992.

Project participants may work toward selected undergraduate or Master's degrees. The grant will provide funds for tuition and partial book costs for up to 64 course registrations this year for department employee-students.

According to Pasti, nine Clinton County social services employees are currently registered for courses offered through the project. She works closely with Eileen Moore, staff development coordinator at the county social services department, in coordinating the project.

College Groups Sponsoring Two-day ADL 'Campus of Difference' Program

Attorney-Arbitrator Selchick Begins DVA Visit on Sunday

Jeffrey M. Selchick, an attorney in the Capital District who practices labor arbitration full time, will be on campus Sunday and Monday (Feb. 23-24) as a Distinguished Visiting Alumnus.

A 1971 graduate of SUNY Plattsburgh, Selchick will be the first of three alumni scheduled to participate in the program this spring. While on campus, he will meet informally with students and faculty, attend and take part in a business class and an honors seminar and deliver a public lecture. The latter, on the topic "The Changing Climate of Labor Relations," will take place at 3 p.m. on Monday in the Angell Center Cardinal Lounge.

The Distinguished Visiting Alumni program was inaugurated two years ago, during the college's year-long Centennial celebration throughout academic 1989-90, and was declared an overwhelming success. It was continued last year and has since been adopted as an ongoing venture planned by a committee of faculty, staff and students in cooperation with the college's Office of Alumni Affairs.

President Approves 'Greek Task Force' Recommendations

After more than a year of study, meetings and open discussion, and following another six-month period of review and modification, a "Report of the Task Force on Fraternities and Sororities" has been accepted and its recommendations have been approved.

Essentially, approval by college President Charles O. Warren establishes written guidelines specifically for fraternities and sororities in the context of their relationship to the institution and its mission where none had existed before. According to Dr. Eldridge W. Roark Jr., vice president for student affairs, their adoption creates the opportunity for fraternities and sororities to achieve their potential as a positive influence within the campus community.

At the time the Task Force report was issued, SUNY Plattsburgh counted 18 fraternities and sororities (five national and four local fraternities and two national and seven local sororities) with a combined membership of 653 students.

Roark explained that Greek organizations have been part of the campus culture here for nearly 100 years, but they have grown and multiplied at an unprecedented rate over the last decade. They had sought and achieved Student Association recognition, allowing them access to and the use of campus facilities.

The 16-member task force of faculty, staff, students and alumni was charged by President Warren to study issues related to fraternities and sororities and "to present recommendations ... with specific reference to recognition, membership selection and education, governance, standards, and a process of evaluation." The entire group was convened 13 times during academic 1990-91, once during the summer to review a draft report with then current officers of the Greek Council, and twice last September—with sub-committees meeting more often during that span. Its recommendations, in a 36-page report, with appendices, cover all five areas defined in the president's charge plus a sixth, labeled "institutional support."

While the recommendations and accompanying rationale are extensive, a few provide insight as to their significance.

Economics Department to Introduce Finance Option in the Fall

SUNY Plattsburgh's Department of Economics will offer a study option in finance, effective this fall.

The option, according to Dr. Michael Stoller, associate professor of economics and chairperson of the department, will be geared toward students who are interested in careers in banking or the investment field. The department currently offers degree majors in economics and business economics.

While the program is economics-based," commented Stoller, "it will provide the necessary foundation in accounting and financial management through three core courses in the Department of Accounting. Additional accounting electives such as Corporate Finance and Stock Market Investment are options that also may be included in the program."

Stoller said the finance option closely resembles many graduate school finance programs, and it will feature a new course, Money and Markets, to be taught for the first time in the fall by Dr. Robert Christopherson, assistant professor of economics. Other economics courses will include Money and Banking and Public Finance as well as the traditional principles, intermediate theory and quantitative analysis courses.

"The economics faculty feel they are offering a very marketable program that meets a long-recognized demand," continued Stoller. "Moreover, it will require no additional expenditure of resources."

Students interested in obtaining more information about the study option in the economics major are encouraged to contact Stoller (ext. 4195), Christopherson (ext. 4218) or Dr. Walter Page (ext. 4213) or inquire at the Economics Department in Redcay Hall.

Grant Funds Core Sampler for Lake Sediment Toxic Study

SUNY Plattsburgh has received a grant from the South Lake Champlain Trust to acquire a box-core sampler for use in an Environmental Protection Agency-funded study of toxic contaminants in Lake Champlain sediments.

The grant is for $9,750. Dr. Robert Fuller, associate professor in the Center for Earth and Environmental Science, is project director.

Fuller described the box core as a device that is lowered from a boat, stabs into sediment on the lake's bottom and hauls the sample to the surface. He said the corer will be used extensively in the south lake for research on sediment physical processes, sediment organisms, resuspension, phosphorus sedimentation and other topics.

"The box core will be housed on board the Melofira, the University of Vermont's research vessel, and will be put into service this spring when conditions permit," said Fuller. He pointed out that the device is crucial to efforts to obtain sample volumes and porewater, adding that it will be made available to all members of the Lake Champlain Research Consortium whose investigations include the south lake.

The consortium, composed of faculty from UVM and the University of Rhode Island as well as Plattsburgh, is spearheading a sediment toxic study whose first-year funding totals $250,000. It is one of the largest research projects approved by the Lake Champlain Management Conference, a group created under the federally funded Lake Champlain Special Designation Act and charged to develop a pollution prevention, control and restoration plan for the lake.

The funding agency for the core sampler, Fuller noted, is a Foundation created as a result of a court settlement in which a paper manufacturer, found guilty of polluting Lake Champlain, was ordered to establish a $500,000 trust fund, with interest on earnings from the trust designated for lake research.

Dawson Appointed to Needs Task Group on Conservation

Dr. James C. Dawson, SUNY Distinguished Service Professor and professor in the college's Center for Earth and Environmental Science, has been appointed by University Chancellor D. Bruce Johnstone to the State Needs Task Group on Environmental Conservation.

The task group is one of five created to meet critical needs of the State of New York as defined in the comprehensive long-range planning document issued earlier this year by the University's Central Administration and titled SUNY 2000: A Vision for the New Century. Environmental conservation was identified as an area of

Dr. Ross Whaley, president of SUNY's College of Environmental Science and Forestry, will chair the group.

Dawson and his colleagues will examine current activities within particular attention along with health, economic development, public education and social services.

Dawson will join a group of experts formed to spearhead efforts to meet state efforts in environmental conservation by "identifying an action agenda that will include basic and applied collaborative research and training with state agencies, work force development, policy studies and strategic planning.

SUNY, assess state needs and opportunities, assess priorities for the University, and oversee implementation of initiatives. The group has been charged to report back, by the early part of the summer, to an advisory council composed of state agency commissioners, members of the governor's staff, selected SUNY administrators and representatives of faculty organizations, and the five task group chairpersons.

Keeling, M.D., director of the department of student health at the University of Virginia; Anne Lomax, assistant director for health education, the University of Delaware; Patricia Fabiano, wellness consultant at Western Washington University; Dr. Reginald Fennell, assistant professor of health education at Miami University of Ohio; and Eric Engstrom of Health Advocates in Charlottesville, Va.

For example, said Roark, pending SA recognition and endorsement by the Greek Council, the college now has the responsibility for chartering all new fraternities and sororities. Also, Greek organizations will be subject to a judicial system based on the existing model covering individual students.

Roark said that fraternities and sororities will complete an annual self-study that basically requires them to "take a hard look at themselves and how well they are achieving their stated goals in terms of membership, scholarship and citizenship."

He noted also a Task Force recommendation that establishes an all-campus standing committee on Greek affairs whose responsibilities include advising the president on all issues that relate to fraternities and sororities, reviewing annual reports and making recommendations regarding the status of each group, and providing guidance and support to Greek organizations to help them maximize their positive potential.

PUBLISHED BY COLLEGE RELATIONS AND DEVELOPMENT FOR THE PLATTSBURGH COLLEGE COMMUNITY • FEB. 26, 1992

14 from Plattsburgh to Assume 'SUNY Day' Advocacy Roles

Fourteen members of the college community will represent SUNY Plattsburgh at "SUNY Day" activities in Albany on Tuesday (Mar. 3).

The Plattsburgh delegation, traditionally among the largest to participate in the annual, SUNY-wide lobby effort, will include college and University advocates from all campus constituencies. Faculty, staff, students, College Council members and alumni from all 64 units in the University system are expected to visit the state capital.

SUNY Day, whose theme this year is "Advocacy for the 90s," will begin officially at 11 a.m. with formal presentations in a hearing room in the Legislative Office Building. The afternoon hours will be spent talking to and meeting with legislators, including Senator Ronald B. Stafford and Assemblyman Chris Ortloff, both of Plattsburgh.

Meetings have been scheduled tentatively also with Senator Kenneth LaValle, chairman of the Senate's Higher Education Committee, and Assemblyman Edward Sullivan, who chairs the Assembly's Higher Education Committee.

Plattsburgh's SUNY Day delegation will include President Charles O. Warren; Dr. Thomas Moran, vice president for academic affairs; Robert M. Garrow, chairperson of the College Council; Council member Jacqueline Walker of Plattsburgh; Rob Antonelli, president of the Student Association; Dr. James Ashe, professor of education and president of the campus chapter of United University Professions; and Betty Lennon, senior stenographer and president of the college's CSEA chapter.

Also, Dr. Marilyn Chase, associate professor in the Center for Human Resources and chairperson of the Faculty Senate; Donald L. Garrant, executive assistant to the president for college relations and development; Malcolm Lavery, director of development and alumni affairs; and students Jacqueline Lichte, past president of the SA; Matt Malvese, former SA vice president for finance; Robert Schofield, executive vice president of the SA; and Hassan Tettah, the SA's vice president for central affairs.

SUNY Day Booklet Supports College's Position on Budget Matters; Presents Progress Report

When they open their doors to Plattsburgh's delegates during Tuesday's annual SUNY Day exercise, state legislators and staff who receive them will have more to grasp than a handshake and more to ponder than verbal pleas for understanding and support.

College officials have compiled an 18-page document titled Beyond the Threshold: Access to Quality at Risk that will be handed to or left with lawmakers and their aides. The booklet contains background on the institution's posture on budget matters and the effects of declining state appropriations — actual and conceivable. It defends the college's rationale for greater support, for "an accessible, responsible and high quality state university."

"In straightforward language, this booklet outlines the college's critical needs, describing in some cases the consequences of inaction," commented President Charles O. Warren. "It shows how state support has declined in recent years and the resulting effects on programs, personnel, services for students and the condition of our physical plant."

At the same time, said the president, Beyond the Threshold emphasizes the positive. For example, he said, it shows how SUNY Plattsburgh has practiced "good stewardship" in an era of fiscal restraint, how the college's admissions picture continues to appear healthy, and how support for sponsored research and private contributions continue to increase annually.

Additionally, he added, it provides brief accounts of the college's public service and research contributions to the North Country community and its citizens, and it points to the institution's tremendous economic impact in the region. The booklet also contains charts reminding readers that Plattsburgh's current students come from every county in New York State and that its alumni — 17,160 strong — reside in every county in the state.

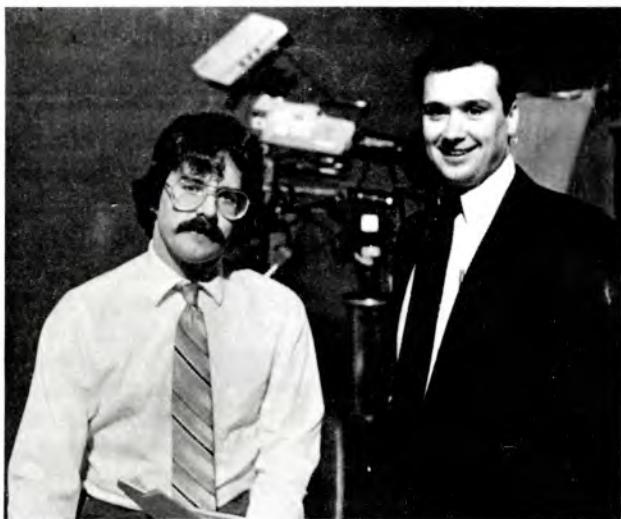

"Our college has an important story to tell, and we believe this publication summarizes it accurately and concisely," said President Warren. "We hope it proves to be a useful and informative resource to our friends in the Legislature."

The booklet, Warren said, is a collaborative effort involving his office and the offices of business affairs and college relations and development. He said that copies of Beyond the Threshold will be made available to members of varied campus leadership groups.

Student's Script in Contention for Broadcast Society Award

A December graduate's original idea for a television drama — developed as an assignment for a course on Writing for Radio and Television — has been picked as one of two finalists in an awards competition sponsored by the National Broadcast Society.

L. John Shearer will find out next

onth whether his script for "Nick Carter Private Eye," a television series about a blind detective, will be judged by professional writers as the top entry in the audio-visual drama category when the Society holds its national convention in Washington, D.C. He'll probably receive the news first from Peter Ensel, assistant professor of communication, who will be attending the March 25-28 meetings and at whose behest the script was created.

"This is a wonderful honor for John as well as a distinctive academic achievement," commented Ensel. He pointed out that students from Society chapters at about 120 colleges and universities throughout the U.S. were eligible for the writing competition.

Shearer, who came to SUNY Plattsburgh as an adult student (he is married and the father of two children and he holds two associates degrees from Clinton Community College — in business administration, '82, and social studies, '85), is no stranger to the field of radio and television. He has worked as a newscaster and operations director for WKDR radio and he currently is a control board operator for WCFE-FM and WCFE-TV, the local public radio and television stations. But his Nick Carter script was the first he had ever written for either medium.

Actually, he said, he was supposed to be a member of a four-student team whose project for the Ensel-taught course included development of scenes, sets, characters, an outline for six episodes of a radio or TV drama and a full script for one. However, with Ensel's approval, he opted to tackle the assignment on his own.

But, why a blind detective?

The answer lies in Shearer's interests and background in working with and helping people with disabilities. He is the founder of the Northeast Radio Reading Service, a totally volunteer organization whose efforts in bringing news and magazine stories to the blind and visually impaired are transmitted twice weekly on Falcon Cable Systems' public access channel. As a youth growing up in the Syracuse area, he was especially close to a cousin severely disabled by muscular dystrophy.

"My cousin is a successful electrical engineer today," said Shearer, whose degree from Plattsburgh is in communication, mass media. "He's living proof that the disabled have as much potential as average people and much greater potential than most others are inclined to give them. I wrote the Nick Carter script with this idea in mind."

In the prize-nominated episode, "A Sound ID," Shearer's hero, a detective rendered blind by a bullet to the brain, is present during a bank robbery and turns out to be the only "witness" who can identify the robbers. When the bad guys come after him, Carter, "a cross between Sherlock Holmes and James Bond," according to Shearer, uses instinct and intelligence to thwart them.

"The drama will work," said Shearer, "if readers come away enjoying the script while, almost subliminally, gaining a better understanding of people with disabilities. The intent is to entertain and educate without bashing folks over the head with the message."

Summer Job and Co-op Education Fair May be Ticket to Seasonal Employment

Students interested in seasonal positions or pre-professional jobs that require background in a specific major are encouraged to attend the annual "Summer Job and Cooperative Education Fair" to be held Monday (Mar. 2) from 1 to 4 p.m. in the Angell Center Ballrooms.

According to Barbara Hebert, student employment coordinator in the college's Career-Life Planning Center, a variety of local and regional employers offering full-time or part-time summer positions as well as cooperative education placements have indicated they will attend the program. The participants include representatives of large and small businesses, summer resorts and state and federal government agencies.

Hebert said that Plattsburgh is one of more than ten SUNY units that will host a summer job fair during March. However, she says, a special feature about the event here is that it integrates seasonal-only employment with cooperative education opportunities, where programs elsewhere focus exclusively on summer jobs.

Federal guidelines on Student Employment and Cooperative Education stipulate that students who expect to graduate in May are ineligible for placement through the job fair.

Innovative Science Lab School Project About to be Launched

by Elizabeth Alexander

Several months have passed since Dr. Stuart J. Baum received a $64,000 grant from the National Science Foundation to support a project titled, "Improving Science Education: An Integrated Approach." An important phase of that project — initiation of a mobile scientific laboratory that will visit regional elementary and middle schools — will be launched later this week.

Two factors guided development of the mobile lab project, according to Baum, professor of chemistry, who explained that it has been in the works for about a year. First, he said, it resulted from his work with area teachers during summer science education workshops. Secondly, it evolved from his concern about the diminishing quality of American science education programs at the elementary and middle school levels.

"Compared with education programs in other developed countries," Baum says, "American programs for young learners, especially in science and math, rank at or near the bottom."

According to Baum, children have a natural curiosity about science when they are young, but something happens about the time they reach seventh or eighth grade ... when they begin to get turned off to the discipline. Most of the problem, he feels, has to do with a lack of hands-on activities for students to experience in school.

"Students are given workbooks and are shown movies and film strips," he says, "and in many classrooms they even have access to computers. But without hands-on experimentation, their interest in science diminishes and they eventually turn their backs on learning about science."

Baum discussed the nature of his science project with students in majors ranging from chemistry and elementary education to mass communications in hopes of recruiting a variety to assist with the project. He signed up between 10 and 12 students who prepare all of the activities on campus in a lab in Beaumont Hall. They discuss, demonstrate and select experiments they think school children will like. They then prepare scripts for experiments, run dress rehearsals, film themselves on video tape, all in preparation for demonstration in front of children inside the classroom.

Beginning with a trip to Monty Street School in Plattsburgh on Friday, the group plans to travel to schools throughout the BOCES district, first reaching as many teachers from Baum's summer workshops as possible. Teachers will be informed of the availability of the program and they can also call Baum to schedule a class visitation.

As part of the program, teachers will receive packets made up by Baum's students that include longer classroom demonstrations for them to use. Packets will also contain detailed experiments for students to do at home — experiments that encourage parental involvement in science education. "This is something that doesn't happen often anymore," says Baum.

Baum's project was targeted to receive $24,000 in state funds to pay for a van to be outfitted and stocked with science equipment and taken on the road. Unfortunately, he said, the money was not released, and efforts are underway to obtain a van from an area car dealership.

Having a van assigned permanently to the project, Baum explains, will allow the project to visit schools two or three times a week. If vehicles have to be signed out from the small fleet maintained at SUNY Plattsburgh by College Auxiliary Services, school visits will have to be limited to one per week.

(Elizabeth Alexander is a spring semester intern in the Office of College Relations and Development.)

Columbus Biographer to Lecture Here Tuesday

Kirkpatrick Sale, author of the controversial biography, The Conquest of Paradise: Christopher Columbus and the Columbian Legacy, will present a public lecture Tuesday (Mar. 3) at 8 p.m. in SUNY Plattsburgh's Giltz Auditorium in Hawkins Hall.

Sale paints a different picture of the explorer whose "discovery" of the New World 500 years ago is being celebrated widely this year. Columbus, Sale contends, turned a society where man lived in harmony and balance with nature into one where man exploited nature and, ultimately, exported that concept of domination throughout the world.

Sale's lecture on Tuesday will focus on "Christopher Columbus and the Ecological Legacy." He will attempt to "strip away the many myths that distort the common perception of (Columbus) and challenges most of the conventional opinions about his life and times." He will ask the audience to take "a frank look at the first part of the record of Columbus's colonial rule so often glossed over, including slavery, slave-trading, cruelty, exploitation and environmental despoliation."

A Cornell graduate, Sale has written or served as an editor for New Leader, The New York Times Magazine, Nation, San Francisco Chronicle, Chicago Tribune, Los Angeles Times, London Sunday Times, Terra Incognita, Resurgence, and others. His books include SDS, Power Shift, Human Scale, Dwellers in the Land, and Guardians of the Sacred Vessel: American Environmentalism 1962 - 1992.

Sale's visit to Plattsburgh is the fourth in the "Presidents' Speakers Series" sponsored by the presidents of the college, of the Student Association and of College Auxiliary Services.

Hockey Cards Finish Strong; Prep for SUNYAC Championships

The Plattsburgh State hockey team crushed SUNYAC foes Binghamton, 13-2, and Oswego, 11-3, at home over the weekend to finish the regular season with a 22-2-2 record overall and a 13-0-1 mark against conference opponents. The Cardinals will host the SUNYAC championship tournament this Friday and Saturday with Fredonia, Oswego and Geneseo rounding out the field.

Junior guard Alicia LaValley made Cardinal sports history Friday night as her first bucket in a 23-point performance versus Brockport enabled her to become the first Plattsburgh State woman basketball player to reach the 1000-point plateau. The women drubbed Brockport, 60-47, but their season ended on a sour note on Saturday with Geneseo prevailing, 72-32.

The men's basketball team split a pair at home, nipping Brockport Friday, 72-68, but dropping a nail-biter to Geneseo, 77-75 on Saturday. The Cardinals, who wound up 15-10 over the regular season, traveled to Fredonia Tuesday for a SUNYAC tournament quarter-final game.

HOCKEY ALUMNI REUNION — More than 25 former Cardinal hockey players from the club sport era through the early 1990s returned to campus last weekend for the annual reunion program sponsored jointly by the Cardinal Booster Club and the Plattsburgh Alumni Association.

Forensic Team 4th at Cornell; Sets Sights on April Nationals

The SUNY Plattsburgh forensic team finished fourth overall among 30 competing institutions at its most recent tournament, hosted by Cornell University. Besides Cornell, the field included teams from Eastern Michigan University, the University of Colorado, Texas Southern, American University, Boston College and Emerson.

Plattsburgh broke into the final rounds in seven of ten events contested at the tournament. The biggest winners were Susan Zwick and Chris Holfester.

Zwick, a senior speech communication major from Bolton Landing, took first place in Persuasive Speaking, a fifth in Informative, a sixth in Dramatic Duo and broke to semi's in Prose Interpretation. She also placed third in Public Address Pentathlon and fifth in the overall tourney Pentathlon rankings.

Holfester, a junior communication major from Smithtown, finished first in Informative Speaking, fourth in both Rhetorical Criticism and After-Dinner Speaking, and first in Public Address Pentathlon.

Other Plattsburgh finalists included

Meg Gossin, who was fifth in Poetry Interpretation and sixth (with Zwick) in Dramatic Duo, and Allison Wise, who broke to the semi-finals in both Prose and Poetry Interpretation. Gossin is a sophomore speech communication major from Rochester, and Wise is a senior business management major from Saratoga Springs.

The Plattsburgh team has one tournament remaining — at Southern Connecticut, March 6-8 — before entering the championship phase of the season. From March 20-22 the team will be at Marist College for the New York State championships, and from April 16-21 the Plattsburgh debaters will compete for national honors at Mankato State (Minn.).

Last year, the Plattsburgh State forensic team finished ninth nationally.

Two More from Plattsburgh Campus Named to State Needs Task Groups

Two more members of the SUNY Plattsburgh academic community have been appointed by University Chancellor D. Bruce Johnstone to the State Needs Task Groups.

Dr. Padmini Gulati, associate professor in the Center for Human Resources, has been named to the Task Group on Social Services, and President Charles O. Warren has been appointed to the Task Group on Public Education. They join Dr. James Dawson, professor of environmental science, (Weekly, Feb. 19) as SUNY Plattsburgh representatives on three of five groups created to meet critical needs of the State of New York as defined in the comprehensive long-range planning document issued earlier this year by the University's Central Administration and titled SUNY 2000: A Vision for the New Century.

Gulati's social services group has been charged to develop an action agenda that will include basic and applied collaborative research and training with state agencies. Other items on its agenda include work force development, policy studies and strategic planning.

'Heritage Society' Created to Honor Planned Gift Donors

The Plattsburgh College Foundation has established a special gift recognition club to pay tribute to individuals who make a financial commitment to SUNY Plattsburgh through estate planning.

"The Heritage Society," as it is known, will honor those who choose to benefit the college by way of a bequest, charitable trust, gift annuity, life insurance or like technique and who provide documentation of their intent to do so.

John and Ruth Walrath of Tequesta, Fla., who have created a trust that will benefit the college, are the first to be installed as Heritage Society members. Ruth Walrath is a 1942 graduate of the college. Others who meet Society eligibility guidelines before January 1, 1993 will join the Walraths in becoming charter members.

"We occasionally hear unofficially that this person or that couple has provided for the college in drawing up a will, codicil or other form of planned giving document," said Don Garrant, executive director of the Foundation. "The Heritage Society gives us a medium to thank these people, publicly if they wish or privately if they request anonymity, in their lifetimes."

Garrant noted that recognition clubs currently exist for contributors to the College Foundation's Annual Giving Program at gift levels from $100 to upwards of $2,500. He said that a brochure announcing the Society's creation will be mailed to those believed to have SUNY Plattsburgh among beneficiaries of their estates and to those who have been identified as likely to have done so.

The brochure defines planned giving as essential to the college's future, particularly in building its endowment resources. It suggests areas worthy of support and describes how planned giving can provide substantial tax ben-

Exhibition of Native American Art Opens Saturday in Myers

Our Land/Ourselves, a new exhibition of contemporary native American art, will open at the SUNY Plattsburgh Art Museum's Myers Fine Arts Gallery on Saturday (Mar. 7) and continues through April 12. As the title suggests, Eisinger continued, the artists are closely aligned to the land — traditionally, physically and symbolically.

For the duration of the exhibit, the college's Art Museum will run a video film series from noon to 4 p.m. from Monday through Thursday in the Myers building lounge (rm. 232). The films represent some of the most creative artistic expressions from tinue on display through April 12.

A 6:30 to 9 p.m. reception will mark the opening, followed by a program focusing on traditional myths and legends by native American story-teller Wolf Song (see related story).

The exhibit consists of the works of 30 artists and includes drawings, paintings, photographs, prints and mixed media. Its emphasis, said Marguerite Eisinger, assistant to the director of the Art Museum, is on the native American experience ... an experience, she added, "which encompasses both deeply rooted cultural traditions and the neo-native expressionism of the 20th century." As the title suggests, Eisinger continued, the artists are closely aligned to the land — traditionally, physically and symbolically.

Also included will be films on cultural and social themes, the role of native American women and romantic drama. Admission to the series, being presented under auspices of Auxiliary Services, the Canadian Film Distribution Center on campus and the Center of the National Museum of the American Indian, Smithsonian Institution, is free and open to all.

Wolf Song's Many Tales from 'Nations of People'

Stories that express cooperation, trust, courage, healing and, above all, humor, make up the repertoire of Wolf Song, whose storytelling presentation will cap Saturday's (Mar. 7) opening of the month-long exhibit of native American art, Our Land/Ourselves, in Myers Gallery.

Wolf Song will perform at 9 p.m. in Hartman Theatre. A native American of primarily Abenaki-Mohawk ancestry, but with Cherokee and some Scotch, Irish and French heritage mixed in, his stories come from many sources from among "the nations of people" of North America. His program, which is free and open to the public, will relate to the exhibition in that the story teller is part of the oral tradition of myths and legends within the native American culture.

Wolf Song brings a message of spiritual value ... of a close connection between humans and nature. Favorite among his stories are "The Creation" and his tale of "Nijia," his wolf-hybrid companion, which provides a new look at common beliefs about wolves, wilderness and civilization."

Showcase Poised to Break All Records; 400 May Take Part

Showcase '92 is shaping up as a record-breaking event.

The fourth edition of the annual celebration of the scholarly and creative pursuits of the college community, scheduled for Wednesday, April 8, has attracted 174 presentations — up from 121 a year ago, also a record year in terms of participation.

"Virtually every department on campus will 'showcase' the depth and breadth of scholarly activity that takes place on our campus in demonstrations, presentations and displays," said Anna Nardelli, associate professor of education and coordinator of the event. Nardelli estimates that Showcase this spring will involve upwards of 400 students, faculty and staff.

Showcase has grown so large, continued Nardelli, that both the Blue Room and the Ballrooms in the Angell College Center have had to be reserved for displays. Indeed, she added, several proposed projects that missed the February 21 deadline for submission of abstract information have been turned away.

Nardelli said she expects the Showcase abstract book will go to press later this week or early next. She hopes to have the publication ready for campus-wide distribution by the time classes resume following spring break.

Plattsburgh's EOP Graduation Rate Above SUNY Average

A state audit has called for a way to measure the effectiveness of SUNY's Educational Opportunity Program, noting that "only" about a quarter of students admitted to the University system under EOP graduate within six years.

A record check here indicates a significantly higher entrance-to-graduation success rate among Plattsburgh's EOP students.

According to the Albany Times Union, the state comptroller's office found that 27 percent of EOP students who entered SUNY institutions in the fall of 1983 had graduated by September 1989, while the University's overall graduation rate was 52 percent during that span. The article points out that EOP "offers a chance for a college education to high school graduates who do not meet the regular admissions criteria, but who show a potential for academic success ..." and that EOP students "are offered financial aid plus tutoring and counseling."

Keith Smith, Plattsburgh's EOP director, reports that 35.2 percent of students admitted to the college as program participants in 1983 earned degrees during the period covered in the audit. With the exception of the EOP class admitted in 1984, the graduation success rate among EOP students admitted in succeeding years through 1986 has been higher than the University average.

"Only 22 percent of the students admitted under the program in 1984 eventually earned degrees," said Smith, "but that clearly represents an aberration. We can show that 38.8 percent who began in 1985 have graduated and that 32 percent from the group admitted in 1986 graduated within five, not six, years.

"It appears that greater than 35 percent of the EOP students admitted in 1987 will graduate within six years," he continued. "That's counting seven from their ranks who continue in good standing."

Cards Take SUNYAC Title; Begin Quest for NCAA Crown

The Plattsburgh State hockey team captured an unprecedented ninth State University of New York Athletic Conference championship over the weekend with playoff victories at Saturday's title game.

The conference crown assures a berth for the Cardinals in the NCAA national championship tournament that gets underway next week at a site to be determined. First, however, they will vie for the ECAC crown in a tourney whose "final four" they will host pending the outcome of a Tuesday night first-round game at home versus Hobart College.

The 24-2-2 Cardinals started slowly against Geneseo in Friday's elimination round, and trailed 4-2 going into the third period. They rallied to tie on goals by Dan Schaly only 14 seconds into the stanza game-winning goal by defenseman Scott Mastrodonato at 5:34, and sealed the win on Chris Fess's empty-netter at 19:02.

With several players idled because of injury or disciplinary reasons, Saturday's championship game was expected to be hotly contested to the final horn. But the Cardinals dominated in every phase of the game, breaking open a 2-1 lead at the end of the first period with three unanswered goals in the second and three more in the third enroute to an 8-4 triumph and the league title.

Len Pereira led the scoring parade in the finale with a four-goal, tourney Most Valuable Player performance. Tim Sullivan tallied twice and team captain Jim Duran and Matt Furtado each potted goals to round out the scoring for the winners.

Plattsburgh players other than MVP Pereira earned four of five spots on the All-Tournament Team. They included winger Fess, defensemen Steve Ashe and Frank Mariani and goalie Mike Mondello.

Self-Study Report Printed and Distributed; Culminates 17 Months' Effort

The report prepared by the Steering Committee for the Self-Study in preparation for the Ten-Year Review by the Middle States Accreditation Team has been printed and distributed.

Copies of the report, which is 187 pages plus appendices in length, have been sent to each department, members of the executive committee, the College Council, the Plattsburgh College Foundation Board of Directors, the Alumni Association's Board of Directors, the Student Association's executive committee and union representatives. Extra copies are available in the Deans' offices, the Vice Presidents' offices, and the President's office. Additionally five copies are on reserve in the Feinberg Library.

The Steering Committee's work began in September, 1990 with the appointment of its fifteen members by President Charles O. Warren. The committee's first task was to design the self-study. Six work committees were then appointed and invited to study a particular area. Each completed its work by June, 1991 and submitted its findings to the Steering Committee, which then worked through the summer to integrate the reports into the comprehensive document.

During the fall semester, a series of public meetings on the draft document were held, and the comments and suggestions received were taken into consideration by the steering committee, which then made the final revisions.

The document begins with an executive summary and includes sections on the college's mission, students and student life, the faculty, the teaching-learning environment, the library and instructional resources, institutional advancement, organization and administration, and planning and resources. Recommen-tions are made in the various areas and summarized in the appendices.

The final report has also been sent to Dr. Catherine Gira, chair of the Middle States evaluation team and president of Frostburg State University in Maryland, and the other members of the team.

The evaluation team will arrive on campus on April 12 and leave on April 15. Prior to their departure, members will offer their initial findings at an open forum.

REPORT — 'MOST STUDENTS FEEL SAFE ON CAMPUS, BUT ...'

(Editor's note: This is the first of two articles focusing on the results of a study on the issue of campus safety conducted and interpreted by the President's Advisory Committee on Personal Safety.)

The vast majority of SUNY Plattsburgh students feel safe on campus and in the surrounding community and they perceive little risk of victimization within the next year. But incidents of physical assault, theft or intimidation occur often enough as to have the potential "to affect seriously the educational experience" of students here.

Those are among the conclusions set down in a 40-plus page report issued by the President's Advisory Committee on Personal Safety and based on "A Survey of Campus Safety at SUNY Plattsburgh" conducted last spring and analyzed over the next several months. The survey was administered at the request of President Charles O. Warren to gather data from students on perceptions of safety, actual incidents which had happened to them during the year, and how the perceptions and incidents may have affected students' actions.

"We're hoping that the study and this and future reports help raise campus awareness about personal safety issues and provide baseline information from which future comparisons can be made," said Dr. Mary Roark, associate professor in the Center for Human Resources who co-authored the report with Dr. Anthony Poveda, professor of sociology, and Dr. Jennifer Scanlon, assistant professor of women's studies. "We are counting on it also to clarify areas where changes can and should be made relative to personal safety on our campus."

Roark said that 548 undergraduates, a random sample of ten percent of the college's matriculated student popula-

Hockey Cards Soar to NCAA Title

The Plattsburgh State Cardinal hockey team parlayed speed, depth, discipline and emotion in capping a storybook season with a pair of weekend victories at home over Wisconsin opponents to capture the 1992 Division III national championship.

The Cardinals, picked by the NCAA to host the four-team title tournament after eliminating Elmira College in a two-game quarterfinal round sweep the previous weekend, turned back Wisconsin-Superior, 8-5, Friday night then overpowered three-time defending champion Wisconsin-Stevens Point, 7-3, on Saturday to claim the crown. Stevens Point had advanced to the title game by trouncing Salem State, 12-6, on Friday.

"Our college community can take a great deal of pride in this Plattsburgh hockey team," commented President Charles O. Warren. "The Cardinals achieved the pinnacle in their sport, and they did it the right way. With outstanding leadership from teacher-coaches Bob Emery and Kevin Houle, gree of sportsmanship all season long.

"It is very important to note," Warren continued, "that their conduct has been salutary not only on the ice, in the community and in their personal lives, but also in the classroom. They are a credit to our institution academically as well as athletically, and a model team nationally in the ideal nurtured at the Division III level of competition."

Highly partisan sell-out crowds of 3,500-plus packed Stafford Arena both evenings. Saturday's championship contest was carried live to many thousands more on WPTZ-TV, Channel 5 in Plattsburgh. (Continued on page 4) statements gleaned from the report that highlight its substance and significance.

Feelings of Safety

- The vast majority of students surveyed felt safe on campus and in the community ... (but) students felt less safe in situations off campus, especially at night and when alone.
- Women felt consistently less safe than did men in all situations ... younger students had a tendency to feel less safe than older students.
- Variables that relate to lifestyle, drinking behavior and place of residence (on or off campus) suggest that those students who are more at risk (drink more, live off campus) generally feel safer than other students.

Perceptions of Risk

- Most students do not expect to be victimized within the next year ... violent victimizations are perceived as least likely.
- The student who feels least safe and most at risk on campus is female, non-white, single, and a younger, first-year or sophomore student.

Experiences Related to Safety

- Affirmative responses among the 243 returned were reported by students in six types of victimizing incidents as follows: theft, 52; verbal threat/harassment, 59; physical threat or intimidation, 15; physical attack or assault, 13; unwanted sexual advances, 44; forced intercourse, 6.

- Males were more likely to be victims of physical threat or attack while females were more likely to be victims of unwanted sexual advances and forced intercourse.

- Incidents happened most often in party situations, and the item identicant number, particularly women, reported they have changed their behavior because of safety concerns.

- Gender, age and alcohol consumption are the most likely factors to influence students to alter their behavior because of personal safety concerns, and women are far more likely than men to do so.
- More than 25 percent of women students reported they had changed their behavior in eight survey categories — going to the library at night; going to the late-night study area; attending night classes, going to the Field House, jogging, dating, going downtown, and visiting friends in other housing.

The report is a public document, and copies are available from its authors and in the offices of the president and college relations and development.

Seminar Friday to Feature Author/Expert on Etiquette

Dr. Wayne Phillips, a member of the faculty at Bridgewater (Mass.) State College and author of The Concise Guide to Executive Etiquette, will present a seminar on etiquette at the college on Friday, April 3. The program, open to all, will be held from 12:30 to 2:30 p.m. in Hartman Theatre. A reception will follow in the Myers Fine Arts Building lounge.

Co-director of The Executive Etiquette Company, Phillips has conducted etiquette seminars and workshops for thousands of management personnel in the U.S. and abroad. His clients include the Chrysler First Corporation, the Upjohn Company, Harvard University and the Bank of Boston.

During his presentation here, Phillips

Two-day International Symposium to Focus on 'Breakdowns'

SUNY Plattsburgh will host a major, two-day, interdisciplinary symposium on "Breakdowns" — as in structures, social and government systems and ideologies — on Friday and Saturday (March 27-28) in the Angell College Center Cardinal Lounge.

Scholars from Austria, Germany, Canada and other parts of the United States will join several Plattsburgh faculty and one undergraduate in making presentations on topics related to breakdowns in disciplines ranging from English, history, environmental science and sociology to psychiatry, philosophy, economics and music.

Symposium events are open to all (see the full schedule published as page 6 in this issue of Weekly).

According to symposium organizers Dr. Bruce Butterfield, professor of English, and Dr. Jurgen Kleist, assistant professor in the Department of Foreign Languages and Literature, featured visiting speakers include Peter Hertz-Ohmes, Eberhard Gorner of Germany, Erich Wolfgang Skwara of Austria, and Gerald Busby and Cynthia Latta. Hertz-Ohmes, a professor of German and humanities at SUNY Oswego, is noted for his translation of Martin Heidegger, Unterwegs zur Sprache (On the Way to Language).

Gorner is a former screenwriter and author for East German television who is currently making films in Berlin, and Skwara is a renowned poet, novelist, critic and essayist who currently teaches German literature at San Diego State University. Busby is a pianist and composer for film and dance who has performed his own works twice in concert in Carnegie Hall; and Latta is an economic forecaster for Data Research Inc., in Lexington, Mass., whose views on the state of the U.S. economy are quoted frequently in wire service, network radio and major news magazine reports.

The sole presentation by a student will be made by Jeffrey Cochran of Vancouver, Wash., who is non-matriculated. A poet and singer who has appeared in local coffeehouses and at several poetry readings, Cochran will read from his own works.

Holfester, Zwick Lead Plattsburgh to State Forensic Crown

March 27-28 was a championship weekend for SUNY Plattsburgh students in more than hockey.

The college's public speaking team won the New York State championship in Forensic in competition hosted Friday and Saturday by Marist College. Plattsburgh outdistanced its nearest competitor, St. John's University, by 57 points to take both the tournament crown and the overall New York State Forensic Championship trophies.

Hofstra finished third, Cornell was fourth and SUNY Binghamton was fifth.

Overall, Plattsburgh won seven of 12 individual event championships contested, and team captain Chris Holfester won four of them — in informative speaking, epideictic speaking, after-dinner speaking and the pentathlon event. Holfester also finished second in rhetorical criticism and sixth in poetry interpretation.

Sue Zwick won the state championship in rhetorical criticism, was runner-up to Holfester in informative and epideictic speaking and finished third in the pentathlon competition. Meg Gossin won the state title in poetry interpretation and was third in persuasion, fourth in single interpretation of drama and sixth in the pentathlon.

Alison Wise became Plattsburgh's 17th state champ in 18 years in persuasive speaking, and Dan Morse finished fifth in extemporaneous speaking. The Plattsburgh team wound up with 20 awards — nearly one-third of the total handed out during the tournament.

According to Dr. Justin Gustainis, associate professor of communication and one of the forensic coaches at the college, the Plattsburgh team, with 20 fewer competitors than either St. John's, Hofstra or Binghamton, entered the tournament as a decided underdog. "But," he said, "when your fewer slots are high caliber slots, being outnumbered doesn't count for much."

Holfester, Zwick and Gossin plan to compete in the national championships to be held next month at Mankato State College (Minn.). Forensic director Albert Montanaro, associate professor of communication, doesn't believe they have much chance to win the title. "Our team is too small for that," he said, "but we should do better than our ninth place finish a year ago."

SUNY DAY — The Albany office of State Senator Kenneth LaValle (R-Selden), chairman of the Senate's Higher Education Committee, was among those visited by the college's SUNY Day delegation earlier this month. L-R: Malcolm Lavery, director of alumni affairs and development; Professor James Ashe, president of the college's UUP chapter; Don Garrant, executive assistant to the president; Jacqueline Lichte, former Student Association president; Robert Garrow, chairperson of the College Council; LaValle; Dr. Marilyn Chase, chairperson of the Faculty Senate; Council member Jacqueline Walker; Betty Lennon, president of the college's CSEA chapter; and Council member Wayne Byrne.

The back-to-back tournament wins gave the Cardinals a best-ever 31-2-2 record (a .939 winning percentage) for 1991-92 and championships in three conferences — the State University of New York Athletic Conference, the Eastern College Athletic Conference and the National Collegiate Athletic Conference.

The Cardinals were 6-0 in post season play, but the road they traveled to the national title was not without controversy and anxiety. First, in spite of their ranking as the top-seeded team and, if precedent ruled, home ice advantage, they were forced to journey to Elmira in quest of the ECAC crown, which they went on to win by defeating Fredonia State and Mercyhurst. Then, a week later, at home, with the Cardinals already one game up and leading 3-1 five minutes into the second period of the second game of the NCAA quarterfinal matchup versus Elmira (a contest they won eventually, 8-1, to gain a spot in the semifinal round), the Soaring Eagles' forward Mike McNamara was checked hard at center ice and fell, striking his head on the arena floor.

Within seconds trainers from both teams and college Student Health Services staff Dr. Merritt Spear and physicians' assistant Anna D'Angelo rushed to his aid and administered cardiopulmonary resuscitation. McNamara was removed from the arena on a stretcher and taken by ambulance to the CVPH medical Center where he was admitted to the intensive care unit in critical condition. He remained unconscious until Thursday of last week, when his condition was upgraded to satisfactory, and by the weekend hospital medical personnel were predicting McNamara, a sophomore from Potsdam, would make a full recovery.

In Friday's NCAA championship weekend opener for Plattsburgh, Chris Fess scored a pair of goals, including an empty-net marker with one second left to play, and goalie Mike Mondello made a pair of game-saving stops late in the third period to spark the Cardinals past Wisconsin-Superior. In Saturday's championship game, Larry Zinger scored twice and Fess potted a goal and assisted on two others as the quicker Cards ended Stevens Point's reign at the top of Division III hockey in easier-than-expected fashion.

The NCAA tournament marked the final appearance in a Cardinal uniform for four graduating seniors: Captain Jim Duran (individualized studies, Woburn, Mass.), Steve Ashe (criminal justice, Springfield, Mass.), Matt Furtado (sociology-criminology, Wollaston, Mass.) and Dan Schaly (criminal justice, Barre, Ont.).

Salem State defeated Wisconsin-Superior 7-6 in sudden death overtime to take third place in the tournament.

In a familiar pose this past season, the Plattsburgh State hockey team celebrates achievement — this time, the 1992 NCAA national championship.

SPOTLIGHT

Dr. Robert Davis, associate professor in the Department of Hearing and Speech Science, presented a lecture on "Noise and Hearing Impairment" at the Harvard School of Public Health, Department of Occupational Medicine in Boston ... Dr. Wallace Feldman, professor of marketing, was in Hungary recently where he gave a series of two-day workshops in Budapest through SUNY's Center for Enterprise Development, a project conducted by the University's Foreign Programs Office in Albany under a grant from the Agency for International Development. The workshop presentations by Feldman were held in three different towns and were designed to help small-scale entrepreneurs develop a more modern approach to business ... Dr. Sylvie Debevec Henning, associate professor of French and chairperson of the Department of Foreign Languages and Literature, has been invited to present a paper titled "Becket in the 1990s" at an international symposium that is part of a Samuel Beckett festival to be held in The Hague, Netherlands, from April 8-12 ... All Students Invited to Attend Next Week's Career Night

Employer representatives from a wide variety of occupational areas will be on campus on Thursday (April 2) to take part in the Career-Life Planning Center's 18th annual "Career Night" program.

The event, says Carolyn Delcore, assistant director in the center, will be organized in a "career fair" setting and will be held from 7 to 9:30 p.m. in the Angell Center Ballrooms. It is seen, she added, as "an excellent opportunity for students to expand their career horizons and gain a better perspective on their futures."

"In tough economic times like these," she said, "it is more important than ever for students to acquire accurate information about the realities in the world of work. With that in mind, it is important to emphasize that Thursday's Career Night is open to all SUNY Plattsburgh students."

Prior to the evening program, visiting employer-guests will be welcomed at a reception and dinner scheduled in the Angell Center Cardinal Lounge and Centennial Room, respectively. Some of the participants, Delcore said, are alumni who are anxious to return to campus to offer advice and help to current students.

Friday will be devoted to seniors exclusively, as a few attending employer organizations will hold interviews for current vacancies among individual students who expect to graduate in May. Appointments for interviews are required, and interested students are advised to schedule them by Tuesday (Mar. 31) in the Career-Life Planning Center, Kehoe Building, Room 606. They should also provide a copy of their resume for each employer's file.

Honors Program Grads to Return to Counsel Current Students

A number of recent graduates of SUNY Plattsburgh's Honors Program who are continuing their education elsewhere will return to campus Thursday and Friday (Mar. 26-27) to participate in a panel discussion and workshop for current students who are interested in attending graduate school.

According to Dr. David Mowry, director of the Honors Program, the returning students, who represented a wide variety of undergraduate majors here, are currently attending graduate or professional schools where they are enrolled in traditional academic disciplines or pursuing advanced studies in law, medicine or business.

A panel discussion will be held at 7:30 p.m. on Thursday in the small auditorium (Room 125) in Hawkins Hall. Panelists will discuss graduate school applications and admission processes, scholarships and other financial aid consideration, the relation between graduate school and career opportunities, and their general experiences as graduate students.

Friday's program will consist of a series of workshops at the Honors Center in Hawkins Hall that will focus on specific areas of graduate education. Mowry said the schedule for the workshops is still being developed, but that it will be available for distribution at Thursday's panel discussion. He invites questions about the events (ext. 3075), noting that students who are planning to continue their education at the graduate level will find them worth their while.

TIAA-CREF Reports Faulty; Benefits Restored to Tiers II, III, IV

The college has been informed that the TIAA-CREF 1991 annual benefit reports mailed recently to SUNY members of the optional retirement program are incorrect.

TIAA-CREF says that the amounts of money credited to individual accounts are apparently accurate, but a miscalculation occurred with respect to projections and future earnings—crediting individual accounts with contributions that were in excess of what they should have been. The problem is being addressed, and amended version of the annual benefit report were expected to be in the mail sometime this week.

Meanwhile, the issue stemming from the State Comptroller's decision in January to stop making employer contributions for members in tiers II, III and IV of TIAA-CREF (reported in Weekly, Jan. 22) has been resolved. On Tuesday of this week, Governor Cuomo signed legislation passed by the State Legislature on contributions to the optional retirement program for members of the affected tiers. That means that employer contributions for the program have been restored to their current rates (12 or nine percent) and contributions will be made retroactively for the months of January and February.

Teacher Education and Resource Centers Join Forces as Sponsors of Intercultural Exposition

The college's Center for Teacher Education and the North Country Teacher Resource Center's Foreign Language Teacher Network are co-sponsoring an "Intercultural Exposition" to be held Saturday (Mar. 28) from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. in Sibley Hall. The day's events are open to all.

The program is billed as "a language showcase to promote cultural understanding by North Country teachers and students," and it will occupy many classrooms as well as the gymnasium in Sibley Hall. It will consist of displays and presentations on cultural activities and foods prepared by children from schools throughout Clinton, Essex, Franklin and Warren counties. Language and multicultural clubs and organizations from the campus community will also be represented.

Students Here Report Higher Comparable Level of Satisfaction

SUNY Plattsburgh students show a significantly higher level of satisfaction in a number of the college's programs, services and characteristics than their counterparts attending other state-operated institutions and the University's arts and science colleges.

That conclusion can be drawn from the results of an American College Testing Program (ACT) Student Opinion Survey administered on this and 44 other SUNY campuses of all types last spring. Among 24 participating state-operated colleges, Plattsburgh's satisfaction average ranked first on one item — campus efforts to address acquaintance rape — and second or third on 23 others.

The student satisfaction gap widens further in SUNY Plattsburgh's favor in comparisons with results from the University's other four-year arts and science colleges. Besides the question on acquaintance rape, Plattsburgh ranked first in satisfaction among the arts and science institutions on 14 other points. They include campus atmosphere of understanding, academic advising services, availability of advisor, and value of information provided by advisor, financial aid services, availability of financial aid information, student health services, help in finding part-time jobs, assistance provided by college staff upon entry, transfer of course credits, availability of courses when (students) can take them, registration procedures, and billing and payment procedures.

Plattsburgh showed up second or third in several other categories. They included contribution to intellectual growth, contributions to personal

Record 171 Presentations Fill Showcase '92 Calendar

SUNY Plattsburgh — what it is and what it's all about — goes on display next Wednesday (April 8) when "Showcase '92" takes center stage throughout the campus.

A record 171 presentations — designed to demonstrate the scholarly and creative pursuits of the college community, especially its students, and to facilitate the exchange and development of ideas — make up the day-long program. The number of performances, productions, lectures, experiments, symposia, workshops and exhibits number 50 more than a year ago, and virtually every academic discipline at the college will be represented.

Classes, clinics and studio and laboratory experiences at the college will be suspended during Showcase, whose programs begin at 8 a.m. and last through the afternoon, to allow for maximum participation and ex-posure to the day's events and activities among students, faculty and staff. Established three years ago, Showcase has evolved to become the college's premier annual celebration of academic excellence.

Among the varied presentations scheduled for Showcase are:

- A Sigma Xi symposium featuring nineteen separate presentations on undergraduate research in biology, chemistry, earth and environmental science, physics, mathematics and psychology;
- A "Topics in Nursing" forum focusing on matters ranging from ethnornursing research and the role of the occupational health to community assessment of pharmacies in Clinton County;
- Photography and lithographic printmaking demonstrations and an undergraduate juried exhibition;

- Performance of original plays by student playwrights;
- A Student Health Center "keeping fit" program and Psychological Services Center presentations on "wellness" and "predictors of students' use and abuse of alcohol;"
- A philosophy symposium and a two-hour panel discussion series on six timely topics in U.S. politics;
- Programs on broad campus issues and issues germane to student affairs;
- Eight seminars on themes in teacher education and three on topics in human services;

Campus Safety Committee: 'More Can and Should be Done'

(Editor's note: This is the second installment in the two-part series focusing on the results of a campus safety study conducted by the President's Advisory Committee on Campus Safety.)

From environmental management and educational programming to provision of services and further study, cautions the President's Advisory Committee on Personal Safety, "there is more that can and should be done" to increase both the reality and the perception of safety at SUNY Plattsburgh.

In summarizing its exhaustive study and 40-page analysis of the issue of campus safety here, the committee formulated recommendations in those categories consistent with its view that the college administration already holds campus safety as a high priority and that "campus safety is a multi-dimensional concern (that) must continue to receive quality attention and resources." Highlights of those recommendations:

Environmental Management:

- Identification and upgrading of parking areas and walkways that are currently inadequately lit must continue.
- Install additional blue lights to the extent of economic feasibility.
- Continue escort service, with efforts to see that the service is well-publicized, non-stigmatized and reliable.

- Explore (the possibility of) telephone access to security from campus buildings during evening hours.

Educational Programming:

• Campus efforts for alcohol education, drug education and sexual assault prevention education exist through "awareness weeks" and individual programs (but) additional formats for delivering education and prevention messages must be found.

• Since data overwhelmingly indicate that the collegiate experience is different for women than for men relative to campus safety, all efforts to increase safety must take gender differences into account.

• Efforts must continue (to ensure) that women are educated about what they should be afraid of; rape education efforts must be continued so that women know that they are more likely to be attacked by an acquaintance than by a stranger.

• Because a very high proportion of offenders (are) male in every category of victimization in the study, male students and staff must be enlisted to address behavior styles which oppress other people.

- Efforts to reduce the amount of drinking that leads to problems must continue.

• There is probably no greater aspect of campus safety which will take creativity and innovation in implementing new interventions than that related to alcohol education, primarily because the extensive efforts currently in place appear to have been insufficient to curb problem drinking among students.

Providing Services:

• The offices of public affairs, judicial affairs, campus life, psychological services, and facilities, maintenance and operations must continue to receive adequate resources.

• Staff to whom students report crime or a breach in campus regulations must receive training ... about how such reports are to be handled.

• Strong penalties should be carried out against staff who are found to have abused their institutional power over students by acts of intimidation or assault.

Further Research

• Further research should be conducted to identify aspects of fear and to determine if there is a correlation between level of fear and actual experiences for men and women.

• This study should be repeated in the future to provide comparative data; a companion study seeking qualitative rather than quantitative data should be developed to complement the original.

growth, new student orientation, learning labs, multicultural content of courses the respondents had taken, the extent the college has helped students appreciate diversity, opportunities for personal involvement, and preparation for lifelong learning.

Satisfaction averages for SUNY Plattsburgh dipped below the 3.0 neutral level (on a scale to 5.0) on only one item—parking facilities, where a 1.65 average ranked the college near the bottom.

The survey instrument was the ACT Student Opinion Survey, modified for use by SUNY and processed by ACT.

It was distributed on this campus by random selection of classes whose instructors requested students to return the forms at the next class meeting. Altogether, 352 forms were returned.

According to Dr. Henry Morlock, professor of psychology and coordinator of assessment at the college, plans are underway to repeat the ACT survey or one similar to it with a larger, more diverse sample. Doing so, he said, will serve to verify and extend the study of "how effectively the college is carrying out its mission in the eyes of its students."

Report Forum on April 14

An open forum on the report of the President's Advisory Committee on Personal Safety has been scheduled for 7 p.m. on Tuesday, April 14, in the Angell Center Cardinal Lounge.

Bank Executive Magaw Next Distinguished Visiting Alumna

Kathy Hopkins Magaw, a 1972 graduate of SUNY Plattsburgh, will be the next Distinguished Visiting Alumnus at the college.

Magaw is scheduled to be on campus next Monday and Tuesday (April 6-7). During her stay, she will meet with several groups of students, be a guest lecturer in several classes in the School of Business and Economics, tour the campus and make a public presentation (7:30 p.m. on Monday in the Cardinal Lounge) on "What We Learned From the 80's." She will also be inducted into the campus chapter of Omicron Delta Kappa, the national leadership honor society, in a special ceremony on Monday.

Magaw currently holds the post of Chase product and production executive and senior vice president of the Chase Manhattan Bank, N.A. Her responsibilities include overseeing the identification, analysis and management of risk in the corporation's products and production capabilities.

Magaw joined Chase in 1973 as a customer service representative. She was named manager of credit card customer service in 1978 and, in 1980, became the quality assurance/control and regulatory compliance executive for the National Financial Services businesses. She was promoted to second vice president in 1978 and vice president in 1981.

In 1985, she was named risk management executive for the Chase's Individual Bank and, in 1988, she assumed product and production risk management responsibility for the corporation. She was promoted to senior vice president in 1992.

She serves on Chase's Community Development and Human Services Subcommittee, is a member of its Securities Lending Committee, and is a director of Chase's Travelers Cheques Corporation. She also serves as a member of the Bank Administration Institute's Advisory Committee for Payments and Securities Systems Risk.

Kocsis Named ODK Province I Leader of the Year for '91-92

SUNY Plattsburgh senior David Kocsis has been selected Omicron Delta Kappa National Leadership Honor Society Province I Leader of the Year for 1991-92.

Province I of ODK includes 26 colleges and universities throughout New York, New Jersey, Maryland, Delaware, Eastern Pennsylvania and the District of Columbia. His selection was announced at the 37 Biennial National convention in Atlanta, Georgia, March 19-22. He will now compete with eleven other Province Leaders of the Year for the National ODK Award.

Kocsis, a psychology major from Glendora, Calif., is president of the SUNY Plattsburgh chapter of ODK, an active member of Psi Chi, the psychology honor society, and Phi Eta Sigma, the freshman honor society. He has been a recipient of both a Redcay Research Scholarship and a President's Fellowship.

Also at the recent convention where Kocsis was honored, Dr. Eldridge W. Roark Jr., vice president for student affairs, was re-elected to a second two-year term as National President of ODK, and Cheryl Hogle, associate director of campus life, was re-elected to a third two-year term as faculty Director of Province I.

In addition, Hogle was awarded the 1992 Robert L. Morlan Faculty Secretary Award. The recipient of this award, which recognizes outstanding service to the local circle and to the society itself, is selected biennially from among the 229 ODK Circle Faculty Secretaries across the United States.

In addition to Roark and Hogle, a seven member student delegation represented SUNY Plattsburgh at the convention: Robert Schofield, Monica Elliott, Robert Lucchesi, Holly Cwirka, Jeff Foote, Dawn Kortright and Ed Smith. Schofield served on the convention Nominating Committee and Elliott on the Public Relations/Communications Committee.

Championship Cards to Host 'Appreciation Night' Friday at 7

SUNY Plattsburgh's 1992 national championship hockey team will host an "appreciation night" in recognition of followers of Cardinal hockey to be held at 7 p.m. Friday (April 3) at the Ronald B. Stafford Ice Arena at the college Field House.

The public event will feature presentations by state, county and city government officials and by representatives of the SUNY Plattsburgh faculty and staff and its Student Association. Members of the Cardinal team and coaching staff—winners of the SUNYAC, ECAC and NCAA championships while compiling a best-ever school record of 32-2-2 on the season—will be introduced individually and will be available after the program to talk with supporters and sign autographs.

A college-wide committee appointed by SUNY Plattsburgh President Charles O. Warren is planning a public testimonial dinner program to honor the championship Cardinal team to be held at a later date. Details will be announced as soon as they become available.

sociology, economics, computer science and other academic and student services areas.

The largest and most comprehensive component of Showcase '92 will be the poster display and demonstration session scheduled primarily for large and small rooms in the Angell Center. Thirty-five separate presentations will constitute this session, and most will be on from noon to 2 p.m.

Also, two programs will be presented via teleconference. One will spotlight Dr. Mary Roark, associate professor in the Center for Human Resources, as a panelist on a teleconference on "Campus Violence Redefined," to be broadcast live from Penn State from 1-3 p.m. under sponsorship of the American College Personnel Association. The satellite telecast, carried to room 105 in Feinberg Library, will also feature faculty and administrators from Indiana University, the University of Iowa, the University of Florida, and Colorado State and Towson State universities.

A second, coordinated by Dr. Douglas Skopp, professor of history, will be on the topic, "Declining Euphoria: Problems in Germany's Unification as Reflected in Recent German-language Newspapers." It can be seen at 8:40 a.m. in Room 207 of Yokum Hall.

A 50-page book of abstracts describing all presentations has been published and distributed throughout the campus. The event culminates several months of planning and coordination by a college-wide committee of faculty, staff and students chaired by Anna Nardelli, associate professor of education.

Weekly Salutes ...

Dr. James M. Lindgren (above), associate professor of history, whose article, "Virginia Needs Living Heroes: Historic Preservation In the Progressive Era," has been awarded the National Council on Public History's G. Wesley Johnson Prize for 1991 as the best article published last year in the quarterly journal, The Public Historian. The work, reports Lindgren, benefited from his earlier presentations at the Colonial Williamsburg Foundation and the annual meeting of the American Studies Association. Also, the editorial board of the University Press of Virginia has accepted for publication Lindgren's book, titled Preserving the Old Dominion: Historic Preservation and Virginia Traditionalism. The work examines the nexus between traditionalism, historic preservation and the politics of culture in Virginia in the late 19th and early 20th centuries. A reviewer has called the manuscript "ground breaking" and "one of the most enlightening glimpses of turn-of-the-century popular thought to come along in many decades." Lindgren teaches courses here on both historic preservation and late 19th- and early 20th-century American history.

Chairperson Chase Shares Disposition of Senate Actions

Academic program changes and policy revisions occur routinely at SUNY Plattsburgh — so much so, in fact, they frequently go unnoticed and unreported.

Faculty Senate Chairperson Dr. Marilyn Chase recently shared with Weekly the disposition of several months of Senate actions forwarded as recommendations to President Charles O. Warren. They can be summarized as follows:

- Program revisions approved: anthropology; biochemistry.

- Programs approved: B.A. in environmental science; B.A. in Environmental Science, study option in national resources planning and management; B.A. in Environmental Science, study option in environmental systems; study option in environmental chemistry; B.A., B.S. in history; Study option in finance; M.A. in school psychology; minor in chemistry.

- Policy approved: "That students who have declared a minor must achieve a minimum GPA of 2.0 averaged over all courses which are applied in satisfaction of the minor (effective with students entering in fall 1992)."

Lyons to Address Sigma Xi Gathering

The changing climate for women in science in higher education will be explored in depth to highlight the program at the annual banquet of the Society of Sigma Xi to be held Tuesday (April 7) in the Angell Center Centennial Room at SUNY Plattsburgh.

The dinner and awards ceremony for Sigma Xi members will begin at 6 p.m. Dr. Virginia Lyons of Trinity College in Burlington, Vt., Sigma Xi Lecturer, will speak on "The Turning Point: Challenge for Change in Higher Education Science" at about 7:30 p.m.

Lyons' lecture is open to all.

The featured speaker contends that historical vignettes of women in higher education science set a context for understanding beliefs about and concerns for the participation of women in contemporary natural science. The challenges, struggles and survival of women in science, she maintains, offer clues to solving vexing problems associated with all students in the sciences.

Lyons will present research suggesting that higher education science "is the key to making impressive changes in how science is perceived in the community, how science is taught at all educational levels, and how young scientists might be encouraged into the academy."

Sigma Xi is the national science honorary society. SUNY Plattsburgh has an active Sigma Xi Club for faculty and students.

Hawkins Work Signals Start of $6 Million in Campus Repairs

Current repairs in the masonry and to the roof in the south interior

In a report to the College Council at last Thursday's Council meeting, J. Derek Allan, director of facilities, pointed out that four masonry crews will be working on Phase 1 of the Hawkins Hall restoration project by mid-May, with completion of that part of the project anticipated by the end of August.

courtyard of Hawkins Hall at the college signal the beginning of what is expected to be an exceptionally busy contract work to abate asbestos in Hawkins, with that undertaking scheduled for completion likewise before summer's end, when work on Phase 2, interior renovations, gets underway.

"All of these activities," said Allan, "together with major roof replacements at the Field House and Saranac Hall, a pump and valve replacement project planned for the Central Heating Plant, and the normal summer repair program, suggest we will have an exceptionally busy summer. We anticipate construction in excess of $2 million to be underway by the middle of the summer—a figure that will balloon to $6 million by year's end."

Allan told the Council that "the fragility of the campus physical plant continues to show," as significant breakdowns have continued to occur almost monthly since the start of the year. He paid tribute to "dedicated employees" in the maintenance and

Middle States Team's Campus Visit Begins this Weekend

An institutional self-study process of nearly two year's duration will culminate this coming week with a visit to campus by nine academics from that many eastern colleges and universities who comprise the Middle States Association Commission on Higher Education's evaluation team.

The team will arrive here Sunday (April 12) and will be housed at the college's Educational Conference Center at Valcour. Its members will be on campus all day on Monday and Tuesday and part of Wednesday to meet with SUNY Plattsburgh faculty, staff, students and members of the College Council and to participate in meetings for members of specific college constituencies.

"While the evaluators have a busy schedule while they're among us," commented Dr. John Myers, professor of history and chairperson of the college's 16-member Middle States Steering Committee, "they are likely to stop and chat informally with college people as they move about the campus. Students especially should be alert to the visit since team members are likely to eat breakfast and lunch in campus dining halls."

Three open forums highlight the evaluation team's visit. The first two will be held Monday — 1:30 p.m. for students and 2:30 p.m. for faculty and staff — in the Angell College Center Cardinal Lounge, with the third scheduled for 1 p.m. on Wednesday, also in the Cardinal Lounge. The last forum, Myers said, will consist of an oral report by members of the evaluation team "who will say what they are prepared to say in the final, written report."

Middle States Association reviews for the purpose of reaccreditation take place every ten years. In preparation, and beginning in September of 1990, several college committees have worked to examine the activities of the college, to appraise its performance and to seek improvement by recommending change. More than 85 faculty and faculty emeriti, professional staff, students, and Council members were involved in the re-

Frome Among Winners in 'Discovery/The Nation' Contest

Carol Frome, a SUNY Plattsburgh alumna and tutor coordinator in the 1,500 and 2,000 manuscripts, and then from 91 finalists.

Claude Clark Learning Center, has been named one of four winners of the 1992 "Discovery"/The Nation award for poetry.

The contest, in its 18th year, is co-sponsored by The Nation magazine and The Poetry Center of the 92nd Street Y in New York City. Frome's manuscript was first chosen as one of the four winners from between

Carol Frome

As one of the winners — selected by a panel of poets which included Molly Peacock, Rica Lesser and Mark Rudman — Frome will receive a $200 cash award; her work will appear in The Nation; and she will give a reading on May 4 at The Poetry Center.

According to Frome, the contest is designed to attract large audiences to poets who have not yet published a book of poems. Notable writers who were "Discovery" winners early in their careers include Lucille Clifton, Marilyn Hacker, Daniel Halpern, Mark Strand and Ellen Bryant Voigt.

Frome has poems forthcoming or published in Poet and critic, Calapooya Collage, The Poetry Miscellany, and others.

She is a 1987 magna cum laude graduate of Plattsburgh and a 1989 graduate of Purdue University's M.A. program in literature and creative writing.

Thirty-three from College Community to be Inducted to ODK

Thirty-three members of the college community are to be inducted to membership in the SUNY Plattsburgh Chapter of Omicron Delta Kappa (ODK), the national leadership honor society.

The induction ceremony is scheduled to take place on Saturday, April 25, at the Newman Center. New York State Senator Ronald B. Stafford, a member of the St. Lawrence University Circle of ODK, will be the induction ceremony speaker.

The spring induction class includes one graduate student, sixteen seniors, fourteen juniors, a graduate of the college and one honoris causa inductee.

Campus Construction

The college's facilities director also noted that the ravages of winter are becoming evident as the current freeze-thaw cycle shows damage wrought by moisture that enters the cracks and crevices of porous brick, mortar and concrete. "Stemming the tide of infrastructure deterioration is, at present, an unequal challenge," he said, "as we survey 'the need' against available resources."

Student candidates for induction are nominated by faculty, staff and current members of ODK; any other candidates may only be nominated by members of the society.

To be eligible for induction, students must be juniors, seniors or graduate students who rank academically among the top 35 percent of their peers, which means a 3.0 grade point average for undergraduates and a 3.5 for graduate students. They must also have "achieved distinction" in at least one of five leadership areas: academics, athletics, social services and campus governance, journalism, speech and mass media, and creative and performing arts.

Also to be inducted into ODK are alumna Kathy Hopkins Magaw ('72), a 1987 recipient of the college's Distinguished Alumna Award, and, honoris causa, Curtis Shipman, president of the Plattsburgh College Foundation.

The student inductees, their major fields of study and hometowns are:

Graduate: Kelly Ryan, counseling, Laurel.

Seniors: Scott Baier, criminal justice, Schenectady; Kathleen Brooks, psychology, Otego; Michelle Coderre, international business, Sodus Point; John D'Amico, accounting, Farmington; Rachel Davis, art,

Vossler Wins Coveted Scholarship for Study at Cornell

It may seem to be a long way from the deep woods of the Adirondacks to the heights above Cayuga's waters, but Carol Vossler & family are getting ready to make the transition without a trace of apprehension.

Carol Vossler with one of her works in the student sculpture court adjacent to the Myers building.

Vossler, of Loon Lake, who graduated from SUNY Plattsburgh in 1990 with a degree in studio art, concentration in sculpture, has received a full-tuition scholarship plus a $4,000 stipend per year for the next two years to pursue a master's degree in sculpture at Cornell University. She was the only applicant from a pool of about 50 (and the sole survivor from among 10 interviewed by discriminating Cornell faculty) singled out to receive the highly coveted award.

But that's only part of the story.

Carol Vossler is not your typical student. Originally from Rochester, she came to the North Country several years ago to study forestry at Paul Smith's College. It was there she met her husband David, and they made the decision jointly to remain in the region, work in logging or another field in forestry, and raise a family.

Carol "worked in the woods," as she puts it, for about six years and gave birth to son Jeff and daughter Kelli, now 9 and 7, respectively, before entering Plattsburgh in 1987 as a transfer from Paul Smith's. Except for a one-semester interlude to bring son Tommy, now 3, into the world, Carol persisted to graduation. She continues as a student today, working, she says, as "an apprentice" to Professor Don Osborn, whom she refers to as the "catalyst" for her own art.

"I'm trying to develop new techniques in sculpture," says Vossler, "using a combination of materials, but mostly steel and wood, and doing some assembly and installation. I feel I have grown immensely here, thanks to Osborn and others on the art faculty—especially (assistant professor) Diane Fine, (associate professor) Dennis Constanzo and (SUNY Plattsburgh Art Museum director) Ed Brohel, who have helped me so much to believe in myself."

When she applied to graduate school at Cornell, it was with the understanding that her family would pack up and move to Ithaca with her ("David and the children have been wonderfully supportive ... my husband is thrilled about my academic success and confident he can find work wherever we go.") She had hopes, at best, for an assistantship. "Everything seemed to fall into place when we went to Ithaca for the interview... foremost, the scholarship and the stipend, but we also managed to find an ideal place to rent when we move in the fall."

Vossler says she is proud of her achievement and excited about studying sculpture at Cornell, but she is also profoundly grateful for the quality education she received at Plattsburgh ("The sculpture facilities are excellent, the standards are high, and the faculty are simultaneously easy to approach, generous with their time and thoroughly professional in attitude."). She hopes to be a practicing professional artist, and maybe do some part-time teaching.

"I'd like to establish my own independent studio," says Carol, adding emphatically that the Vossler family's future is tied to the North Country. "We're not selling our place in Loon Lake," she says. "We don't expect to be the same people when we come back, but we are coming back."

Students' Work Wins Honor in First Film, Video, TV Festival

While most students who could afford it flocked to the beaches of Florida or the Caribbean Islands over spring break, senior Kevin Fox headed for sunny California.

He didn't go for a tan, and he didn't go for pleasure. What's more, the trip didn't cost him a dime.

Fox, a communication major, traveled to Los Angeles to receive recognition for his creativity as co-writer/editor/producer/director of and a performer in Mind's Eye, a television program honored in the first-ever Festival of Student Film, Video, Television & Animation held March 21 at the University of Southern California. The Festival, billed as "the national showcase of top student works," was sponsored by the National Association of College Broadcasters.

One of his collaborators on the video project, December graduate Matt Merenda, who is currently working as a production assistant for a cable company in his home town of White Plains, accompanied him to California. "But," says Fox, whose way was paid by an honoraria from College Auxiliary Services, "Matt had to pick up his own expenses."

A third project participant, fellow communication major Greg Weeks, a junior from Rochester, couldn't make the journey. "He's spending the spring semester in England," Fox explained.

The entry by Fox and his colleagues—actually video productions of a number of short stories filmed on campus in a format he likened to "Twilight Zone"—was selected as a finalist in the "experimental television" category. Students from colleges and universities throughout the United States submitted more than 300 film, video and television productions for Festival judging in 15 categories, and about 90 were picked to receive first place, finalist or certificate-of-merit citations.

More important than the recognition, says Fox, is the exposure Mind's Eye will receive coast to coast. The program, developed for a practicum course titled "PSTV," will be beamed by satellite on the University Network to campuses everywhere.

Fox, whose hometown is Lindenhurst, says he was "unimpressed" by Southern California, but adds that he enjoyed interacting with students from all parts of the country and viewing their work. "I'm especially grateful to College Auxiliary Services," he says "for making the trip possible financially."

Ambassador's Visit Wraps Up Presidents' Speakers Series

"Can Boris Yeltsin and the Independent States survive the cold war?"

Jack Matlock, U.S. Ambassador to the former Soviet Union from 1987 until last August, will attempt to provide the answer to that question and others focusing on changes sweeping the crumbling USSR when he lectures at SUNY Plattsburgh on Wednesday (April 15).

The talk by Matlock, who now serves as a consultant for ABC News, is scheduled for 8 p.m. in Giltz Auditorium in Hawkins Hall and is free and open to all. It is the final event in the 1991-92 SUNY Plattsburgh Presidents' Speakers Series.

Few Americans know the Soviet states and Eastern Europe and their peoples better than Matlock, who frequently conducted interviews in fluent Russian for Soviet media, thus becoming a familiar face on television worldwide. Under contract now to produce a book for Random House, he is the author of a handbook to the 13-volume Russian edition of Stalin's Collected Works, and he has published numerous articles on U.S.-Soviet relations, Soviet foreign policy and government, and Russian literature in American, Soviet and Western European newspapers and magazines.

Matlock's ambassadorship did not come about by political appointment; rather, he achieved it on the strength of his performance, beginning in the mid-1950s, as a U.S. Foreign Service officer. Besides three American Embassy assignment in Moscow, Matlock was Ambassador to Czechoslovakia from 1981 to 1983.

He has served also as special assistant to the president, as senior director of European and Soviet Affairs on the National Security Council, and as director of the State Department's Office of Soviet Union Affairs. With the exception of the Carter-Brezhnev meeting in Vienna in 1979, he participated in every Summit Meeting since 1972.

The Presidents' Speakers Series at Plattsburgh is coordinated by the presidents of the college, the Student Association and College Auxiliary Services, and funded by CAS.

Peter Ensel, assistant professor of communication and chapter advisor, was a double winner. He was cited as "State Coordinator of the Year" among the 50 states, and he received an honorable mention award as "Chapter Advisor of the Year."

December graduate L. John Shearer of Plattsburgh won the scriptwriting competition in the audio-visual drama category for "A Sound Idea." His script was developed for a television series about a blind detective titled "Nick Carter, Pri-

City, was the winner in industrial/corporate video competition for a video he prepared for Quick Cast Ltd. in Plattsburgh. As a chapter, the college's AERho won awards for "model chapter" and honorable mention for most improved chapter.

Several students joined Ensel as convention participants, where they attended seminars on topics in the broadcast field ranging from sales and advertising to computer graphics and advanced media production techniques. Later, they elected officers for 1992-93 as follows: President, Douglas MacKenzie, a senior from Sloatsburg; Vice President, Bruce McDonald, a junior from Champlain; Treasurer, Liza Bauer, a sophomore from Monroe; and Secretary, April LaDuke, a junior from Schenectady.

SUNY Plattsburgh will host the combined East/Northeast regional convention of the National Broadcasting Society in October.

History Honors Students Perform Well at Regional Parley

Three history majors from SUNY Plattsburgh presented papers at the New York State Regional Conference of Phi Alpha Theta, the national history honors society, held last Saturday and hosted by SUNY Albany's society chapter.

Seniors Blake Harrison and Sarah Swedberg, and junior Donna Bohon, all reading papers they prepared in an Honors Seminar taught by History Department chairperson, Professor Altina Waller, were accompanied to the conference by SUNY Plattsburgh's Phi Alpha Theta advisor, Professor Douglas Skopp.

Bohon's paper, "A Railroad in the Countryside: Ellenburg, New York," which described and analyzed the impact of the construction of a railroad linking Ellenburg to Boston and Western New York and Canada after 1850, won one of the conference's three prizes for "Best Papers."

Sarah Swedberg's paper, "The Political Economy of Early Plattsburgh," argued that women provided essential work and organizational skills as Plattsburgh established itself at the beginning of the 19th century. Blake Harrison's paper, "Temperance and Capitalism in pre-Civil War Plattsburgh," analyzed the reasons for the growth of a temperance movement in the city, a reflection of the prevailing class' concern for order, prosperity and morality.

All three of the Plattsburgh students' papers were based on original source materials in the College's Special Collection in Feinberg Library, as well as area archives.

Professor Skopp said, "I'm so proud of our students. They presented exceptionally interesting and well-crafted papers, reflecting a great amount of energy and insight. Professor Waller is to be congratulated for her guidance and support of their efforts."

Besides the SUNY campuses at Albany and Plattsburgh, Hartwick College, Hamilton College, Siena College, and Skidmore College participated.

Budget Forum Set for Tomorrow

President Charles O. Warren will host an open forum on the proposed 1991-92 budget for the college at 12:30 p.m. tomorrow (Apr. 9) in the Angell College Center Blue Room.

President Warren and several members of the college's Executive Council will be present to address budget matters and answer questions from faculty, staff and students.

Hockey Champions Honored

SUNY Plattsburgh's 1991-92 hockey team, which compiled a 32-2-2 record on the season and won three conference titles, including the NCAA's Division III national championship, was honored twice last week. Above, a delegation representing the team and the college visited the State Capitol on Tuesday, as guests of Senator Ronald B. Stafford and Assemblyman Chris Orloff, where the Cardinals were honored by the Legislature — in a resolution passed jointly in the Senate and Assembly — for their achievements on the ice, academically, in service to the community and for their season-long display of sportsmanship. L-R (standing): Julie Terrizzi, sports information director at the college; Rob Lucchesi, SUNY Plattsburgh Student Association Senator for Athletics; Assemblyman Orloff; Senator Stafford; Cardinal hockey captain Jim Duran; and the college's Director of Athletics, Peter Luguri; and (seated, L-R) Plattsburgh State hockey Coach Bob Emery and Assistant Coach Kevin Houle. Below, more than 1,000 followers of Cardinal hockey turned out Friday evening for an "Appreciation Night" program at Stafford Arena sponsored by the college and its national championship team. Tributes to the team came from college and Student Association representatives and from Stafford, Orloff, Clinton County Legislature Chairman Robert Bruno and city of Plattsburgh Mayor Clyde Rabideau. In turn, Cardinal Captain Duran and Coach Emery saluted the community's hockey fans for their loyal support throughout the championship campaign.

Documentary Explores Middle East Conflict

The documentary The Struggle for Peace: Israelis and Palestinians will be telecast Wednesday (April 15) at noon in Room 105 of Feinberg Library.

The one-hour video explores how average citizens on both sides of the conflict are working for peace. Also, from 1 to 3 p.m. on Wednesday, a closed circuit video conference titled The Prospects for Peace in the Middle East will be aired.

Both programs are sponsored by the college's International Awareness Forum and the Office of the Dean of Arts of Science, and both are open to all.

WEEKLY

PUBLISHED BY COLLEGE RELATIONS AND DEVELOPMENT FOR THE PLATTSBURGH COLLEGE COMMUNITY • APRIL 15, 1992

College a $122 Million Asset to Clinton County

SUNY Plattsburgh's economic impact in Clinton County totals nearly $122 million.

At a meeting today (Wed., April 15) of the Board of Directors of the Plattsburgh and Clinton County Chamber of Commerce, held at the Chamber's offices in Plattsburgh, college President Charles O. Warren presented the results of a published research report titled "Impact." Subtitled "A Report to the Community," the study, conducted by the college's Office of Analysis and Assessment and produced by its Office of College Relations and Development, spotlights not only SUNY Plattsburgh's effect on the region's economic vitality but also its educational, cultural, research and service contributions to the community (see related story).

Citing data for calendar 1991 on expenditures by faculty, staff and students, purchases by the institution itself and spending by people who visit the area because of the college, the report shows that SUNY

Plattsburgh's direct spending in Clinton County last year totaled $58,083,702. Using a "multiplier factor" of 2.1, meaning that every SUNY Plattsburgh-related dollar expended in the county generates $2.10 in actual spending, the college's combined direct and indirect economic impact in the county in 1991 totaled $121,975,774.

An analysis of direct spending shows that employees spent $29,611,097; students spent $18,384,219; the college purchased goods and services locally totaling $5,179,776; College Auxiliary Services, Research Foundation and food services expenses were $1,568,681; visitors to the college spent $2,992,875; and veterans' benefits totaled $347,054. The average expenditure per college employee in 1991 totaled $15,717, while each student spent $2,991 locally.

Other highlights of the economic impact report:

- SUNY Plattsburgh employees and students accounted for $1 of every $16 in retail sales in Clinton County last year, including $1 of every $26 spent in food stores; $1 of every $17 spent in restaurants; and $1 of every $27

'Impact' Features College's Value to the Area Educationally, Culturally and in Other Ways

Besides the college's economic value to the region, SUNY Plattsburgh's newly released "Impact" publication features the college's worth educationally and culturally, in terms of economic development and public service, and as an information and entertainment resource and a major contributor to the quality of life in the region.

It is punctuated also by testimonials from community leaders.

In the education category, the publication points to enrollment figures showing that 25.3 percent (1,560) of the students the college serves come from Clinton, Essex and Franklin counties, to extension courses offered at off-campus locations, to the college's affiliation with regional elementary and secondary schools, and its sponsorship annually of many courses, workshops and seminars for non-traditional students. It notes that greater than 25 percent (4,403) of the alumni the college has on record have chosen to live and work in the three-county North Country region.

The publication also focuses on the public service roles of its Institute for International Business, Education, Research and Training; its Alzheimer's Disease Assistance Center, its speech and hearing, reading and psychological services clinics, and programs offered through its Centers for Human Resources and Earth and Environmental Sciences.

Compactor Truck in Operation, Thanks to CAS and M&O

Thanks to the financial aid of College Auxiliary Services and the efforts of the Maintenance and Operations Garage personnel, a new compactor truck has been put into service for the recycling of cardboard.

According to Edward Bortnick, the college's environmental health officer, the new recycling initiative has met with huge initial success. The truck, he said, is running four days a week, picking up cardboard in residence halls, in academic buildings, dining halls and the College Center.

"It is estimated, he said "that 80 percent of the cardboard on campus that was going to the landfill is now being recycled. Besides the greater well being of the environment, the benefits of cardboard recycling will be realized in cost savings from trash hauling and landfill fees."

The College's recycling program, Bortnick added, is presently recycling office paper, newspaper, cans and cardboard. Large bins for newspaper recycling drop-offs are located at the Myers Fine Arts entrance, under the podium, and at the rear of Hawkins Hall, facing the tennis courts.

Recycling pickups are as follows: Thursday—office recycling; Wednesday—newspaper pickups; Tuesday thru Friday—campus dining halls and CAS.

College's Direct Economic Impact Tops $58 Million spent for purchase and maintenance of automobiles.

- Faculty, staff and students spent nearly $14.6 million for housing and housing-related expenses; $7.28 million for food; $4.8 million for transportation; $5.1 million for entertainment and recreation; $2.7 million for insurance; and $2.7 million for clothing.
- Direct local expenditures by the college exceeded $4.2 million, headed by spending for supplies and equipment ($1,175,566), for contractual services ($1,002,037), for fuel oil ($969,090), and for electricity ($441,589).

In presenting the report, SUNY Plattsburgh President Warren noted that it was developed to help the college's friends and neighbors "to come to a better understanding" of what the institution means to the community—and what the community means to the college. "The past few years have been challenging and difficult," he said, "but they also have been exciting.

"While economic realities have introduced significant concern into our professional lives, these difficulties have led to our becoming a better college. We take pride and pleasure in being part of the North Country and we are especially appreciative of the continued support we receive from the community."

About 1,000 copies of the published study have been distributed to the area's Chamber of Commerce membership. A limited supply is available in the college relations and development office (ext. 2090).

According to Kevin Carroll, president of the CVPH Medical Center in Plattsburgh, the college and its educational and cultural influences loom as significant advantages in the hospital's efforts to recruit professionals. Ralph Boardman, managing director of Wyeth-Ayest Laboratories in Rouses Point, believes "the dynamic and vital partnership which exists between North Country businesses and SUNY Plattsburgh has helped keep the economy here strong and vigorous."

"Whether it's through progressive participation with the local business community or the attention to quality higher education," comments Any Whitehead, executive director of the

Plattsburgh and Clinton County Chamber of Commerce, "the Plattsburgh community's quality of life is greatly enriched through SUNY Plattsburgh's presence in our area." Whitehead is one of five community leaders quoted in "Impact."

Plattsburgh Mayor Clyde Rabideau feels the city's "quality of life, economy and culture are buttressed" by the presence of the college, while Lola Johnson, executive director of the Council on the Arts for Clinton County, expresses appreciation for the college's "unusually generous, long-term commitment to commu-

Alumni Board Celebrates Opening of Hawkins' Conference Room

Members of the Board of Directors of the SUNY Plattsburgh Alumni Association converged on campus last weekend for their annual spring meeting.

The first order of business was to celebrate completion of the Alumni Conference Room, which is located adjacent to President Charles O. Warren's office in Hawkins Hall. The Association had provided funding for the renovation and furnishing of the room.

The last portion of the conference room project was completed last week with the hanging of about 30 historical photographs of the college's faculty, students, administration and buildings. The photographic work was accomplished by Robin Brown, who received assistance in selecting, framing and hanging the work from librarian Joseph Swinyer, art museum preparator Marjorie Millea and Museum Director Edward Brohel. Members of the campus community are invited to visit the room and view the photographs.

The alumni directors met for several hours on Saturday in the Alumni Conference Room. President Warren brought them up to date on the state of the college, reviewing not only the news on the latest state budget, but also outlining numerous positive initiatives currently underway on campus.

Board members approved a new membership card program for members of the association. Beginning with the May 1993 commencement, graduates who have paid alumni dues during their undergraduate years will receive a formal life membership card in the Alumni Association. In addition, they approved investigating the possibility of offering a one-year, no-cost, $5,000 life insurance policy to all graduates who become life members in the association.

A proposal to fund an Alumni Speakers' Series also received the board's approval. Alumni Director Mal Lavery explained the series as a spin-off of the highly successful Dis-mittee to develop the program. They will shortly begin soliciting the faculty for suggestions of alumni program participants.

LeMoyne's Conger To Speak at Economics Banquet

Dr. Darius Conger, professor of economics at LeMoyne College, will speak on "The Economics of Marriage and Divorce" at SUNY Plattsburgh on Tuesday, (April 21) at 4:15 p.m. in Yokum 202.

The talk, open to all, is being presented in conjunction with the School of Business and Economics' spring awards banquet, to be held later that day in the Angell College Center Ballrooms.

A special feature of this year's banquet will be a recognition program for students who will be receiving awards for academic excellence at the college's May 2 spring convocation program and the induction of new members of Omicron Delta Epsilon, the School's economics honor society.

Guest speaker Conger is a widely published author whose research includes several articles in the fields of econometrics and comparative economic systems in addition to "the economics of gender relations." His visit is being sponsored by the School and by College Auxiliary Services.

'SOS' Program to Provide Relief to Overburdened Offices

SUNY Plattsburgh's Personnel Office is launching a program titled "Sharing Opportunities for Support" (SOS) that is designed to provide needed clerical services to campus offices where workloads increase temporarily or become burdensome because of staff shortages.

Under the program, the Personnel Office will serve as a clearinghouse for requests for help and support from all areas of the campus. Its staff will also be responsible for tracking available "person-power" and matching needs with skills. With support from supervisors, it will rely on staff coming forward to volunteer their services during periods of relative inactivity in their permanent positions.

It is not uncommon, explains Bob Tabor, senior personnel associate, that circumstances arising from disabilities, long-term illness or retirements or resignations create situations in campus offices where work is completed late or not at all. The problem, he adds, is often compounded by budget constraints that dictate that positions must remain open for weeks or months or, sometimes, permanently.

The objective of SOS, says Tabor, is to make the most effective use of a major campus resource—its clerical staff. The program's concept is one of sharing talents and time between and among offices.

"We rarely know of individuals who may have some extra hours available," says Tabor, "so we are offering an incentive to those willing to become part of SOS. Staff who share a minimum number of hours of support in another department will be invited to a luncheon held semi-annually to honor them. We are looking at other ways to reward these employees."

Tabor acknowledges that staff and supervisors alike may be reluctant to admit that workloads drop off occasionally. But he points out that it is not the purpose of the program to identify areas for cutbacks in full-time clerical support.

"The idea behind SOS came from Bonnie Burdo, Secretary 1 in the Department of Foreign Languages and Literature," Tabor says. "We have discussed it with union representatives who feel SOS will work if all supervisors across the campus get behind it. We will be sensitive to 'out-of-title' work situations and, if feasible, SOS participants will be allowed to work in their 'home' areas."

Spotlight on Showcase

Among the more than 170 presentations featured in last Wednesday's highly successful Showcase '92 program were (top) "Curriculum Inclusion: A Lending Library for Students and Faculty," a poster session and resource table offering help or suggestions to students for term paper topics on women and minorities organized by Visiting Associate Professor Dr. Marjorie Pryse, and (bottom) "Then and Now: Black and White Photography, 1978-Present," an exhibit of 40 prints encompassing 14 years of photographic work by Scott Wilber, a senior English major from Elmira.

IBERT-Sponsored Parley Spotlights Opportunities in Exporting to Europe

"Europe on the Move: Opportunities for North American Business" is the title of a day-long seminar for business professionals, particularly those in the exporting field, to be held here Wednesday (April 21) in the Angell Center Cardinal Lounge. The event is co-sponsored by the college's Institute for International Business Education, Research and Training (IBERT), its Technical Assistance Center (TAC) and the Plattsburgh and Clinton County Chamber of Commerce. It is the third seminar in a series presented by IBERT and TAC, and it is funded in part by a grant from the U.S. Department of Education, Business and International Programs.

According to IBERT's Marek Lyzwinski, North American exporting and investment in Europe will be affected significantly by the recent integration of Europe, including the European Community, the European Free Trade Association and the association, in the near future, of Poland, Hungary and Czechoslovakia. Stronger competition, simplification of regulations and the economies of scale of the single market, he says, make for both increased opportunities and challenges to North American exporters.

Wednesday's program, he added, will provide an excellent opportunity for participants to learn more about the European Community, to meet prominent professionals from the U.S., Canada and Europe who are engaged in North American-European Community business, and to network with colleagues in the exporting business. Presenters will include representatives of the Delegation of the Commission of the European Community to the United Nations, the U.S. Commerce Department's European Community Affairs Office and the Canadian-German Chamber of Industry and Commerce in Montreal.

Entertainer Chapin to Receive Distinguished Alumnus Award

Musician-composer-entertainer-humanitarian Tom Chapin will receive the Distinguished Alumnus Award during spring commencement exercises at SUNY Plattsburgh on Saturday, May 16.

Chapin, a 1966 graduate of the college who excelled in basketball as well as music, earning small college All-America honorable mention in 1965, will also represent the alumni constituency as one of three graduation ceremony speakers (see related story). The Distinguished Alumnus Award is presented by the college and the Board of Directors of the Alumni Association to honor graduates of SUNY Plattsburgh "for their achievements, their humanitarian efforts and/or their contributions to the college."

Chapin has achieved recognition as a gifted entertainer who charms audiences of all ages, whether he's performing in a major concert hall, an outdoor festival, in front of a symphony orchestra or in an intimate coffeehouse. According to Billboard Magazine, "He (Chapin) is one of those natural-born entertainers who, with nothing more than guitar in hand, can totally captivate."

The award at commencement will not be the first Chapin has received from his alma mater. In 1986 he was

Lichte, Beach to Join Chapin as Commencement Speakers

Following a format adopted two years ago, a student and a member of the faculty will join a member of the alumni body as featured speakers at the college's annual spring commencement exercises next month.

Jacqueline Lichte, immediate past president of the Student Association, and Dr. Richard J. Beach, professor and director of the Center for the Study of Canada and International Studies, will share speaking duties with Thomas Chapin '66 (see related story, above) during the graduation program on Saturday, May 16 at the college Field House. The student-faculty-alumnus speaking arrangement was initiated in 1990 as a highlight of the college's year-long centennial celebration, and it was warmly received.

Lichte, a junior education major from Barksdale, La., served as vice president for central affairs for the SA before becoming president for calendar 1991. Her administration was marked by a strong effort to strengthen relationships between the college community and the community at large, highlighted by initiation of the "Adopt-a-Block" program that involves off-campus students in neighborhood improvement projects.

As president of the SA, Lichte was the undergraduate representative on the College Council, and she also served as a member of the Board of Directors of the Plattsburgh College Foundation. She was a member of the College Auxiliary Services Board of Directors, the Food Service Evaluation Committee, the college's Committee on Greek Affairs and the College-Community Relations Board.

inducted to the Plattsburgh State Sports Hall of Fame. Less than three years later he returned to campus to help the college observe its 100th anniversary.

On June 15 of 1989 — Founders' Day at SUNY Plattsburgh — he helped launch a year-long centennial observance by headlining a benefit "family concert" in Hawkins' Giltz Auditorium, with proceeds marked for a scholarship fund to provide financial help to disadvantaged students at the college.

Chapin has gained widespread critical acclaim in the last few years for recordings aimed at children from 4 to 11 years of age and their families. He, with other recording artists, have created a body of songs which are becoming children's classics, including Family Tree (1989), Moonboat (1989) and Mother Earth (1990). This past year Mother Earth was named "Notable Children's Recording" by the American Library Association and received the Parent's Choice and the New York Music Awards for "Best Children's Album."

His adult fare includes three albums, Life is Like That, In the City of Mercy and Let Me Back into Your Life, and a fourth, So Nice to Come Home, due out this fall. His non-music contributions to the performing arts include a five-year stint as host of ABC-TV's Peabody and Emmy Award-winning children's show Make a Wish, and, more recently, as host of the National Geographic Explorer series on the Turner Broadcasting Network.

Chapin works to benefit many charitable organizations, but he is known primarily for his contributions as a member of the Board of Directors of WHY (World Hunger Year). The New York City-based hunger organization was founded in 1975 by Tom Chapin's late brother — singer-songwriter-humanitarian Harry Chapin.

phy, was promoted to associate professor in 1975 and to full professor five years later. He has been director of the Center for the Study of Canada and the Center for International Education since 1975 and 1976, respectively. Beach is the first and only member of the SUNY Plattsburgh campus community to receive both the Chancellor's Award for Excellence in Teaching, presented in 1976, and the Chancellor's Award for Excellence in Professional Service, conferred in 1983. He was the principal speaker at the spring commencement ceremony at the college in 1977.

A member of the editorial board of Quebec Studies since 1988 and the author or co-author of numerous articles and papers presented and published in the U.S. and Canada, Beach is or has been a member of a variety of campus and community organizations and of several international in scope. The latter include the National Consortium for Teaching Canada, the International Council for Canadian Studies, the Association for Canadian Studies in the U.S., which he served as councillor, vice president and president during the period 1979-1987, and the Center for Canadian-American Relations at the University of Windsor.

Ringing the Bell of Success

One of the major segments of the Annual Giving Campaign came to a close last Wednesday, with the end of the Annual Alumni Phonothon. Approximately 35 student callers telephoned more than 11,100 alumni from Maine to California during 15 nights in late March and early April and asked for their financial help. The callers generated 2,315 pledges totalling $88,737. Pledges ranged from $5 to more than $1,000 and averaged just over $38. An additional 1,177 alumni promised to make a contribution to the annual fund drive, but did not disclose the amount of their pledge. Alumni contributions already received as a result of the mail and phone campaigns are running well ahead of last year's total at the same time and stand, as of last Friday, at about $46,000. Some of the 1992 phonothon workers celebrated the last night of calling with smiles and bell-ringing (the bells were rung every time an alumnus made a specific pledge). They are (seated, l-r) Rob D'Alesandro, Danielle Thibault, Kelly Rose, Angeline Manning and Pete Welker and (standing, l-r) Joellen Alps, Co-coordinator Shari McCormick, Jodi Grief, Sharon Weinbaum, Mida Kum, Wendy White, Deana Preston, Suanne Rogers, Kim Huba, and Sara Vitagliano. Other workers included Co-coordinator Holly Cwirka, Tammy Babin, Kelly Beckwith, Shelly Bristol, Joanne DiFrancisca, Judith Dinar, Day Eastman, Kelly Jaeschke, Stacy Johntry, Diane Kwedlo, Karen Larkin, Jackie Lichte, Andrea Link, Rob Lucchesi, Jennifer Scharpeger, Kathy Tallman, Joe Tatro, Kathie Tilley and Thea Van Alstyne.

Chase First Woman to Become Faculty's Presiding Officer

Dr. Marilyn Chase, associate professor and former director of the Center for Human Resources, has been elected as presiding officer of the Faculty.

Her election marks the second "first" for Chase in as many years. Last spring she became the first woman chosen to lead the Faculty Senate; now she will be-

As presiding officer, Chase will serve as faculty representative to the College Council. She will have responsibility also for calling and pre- siding over meetings of the faculty person of the Senate, Chase, a mem- ber of the college's faculty since 1967, served twice as a member of that governance organization and had been a member of five of six Senate standing committees.

Dr. Manwell joined the Plattsburgh science and mathematics faculty in 1945 as an instructor, and taught courses in anatomy, biology and physiology.

Trustees Promote Tracy to Distinguished Teaching Professor

Dr. Ann Tracy, professor of English and a member of the SUNY Plattsburgh campus community for the past Charles O. Warren. "Students know her as a responsive, resourceful and highly competent professor who requires excellence on the one hand and encouragement and excitement for learning on the other.

"Few faculty here and probably in the SUNY system can match Dr. Tracy's prowess for publishing, and hers is an amazing accomplishment considering she carries a full teaching load that includes courses in freshman composition to upper-level Renaissance literature. Ann Tracy exemplifies what is best about SUNY Plattsburgh and our university, and I know all of her colleagues join me in offering her our sincere congratulations."

Tracy's nomination refers to her continuously strong evaluations by students, her development of new courses, mini-courses and seminars, her willingness to spend extra time with students, particularly those who mistakenly believe they'll never rise above mediocrity as writers, and her scholarship and professional growth, especially as an author whose work is "pioneering" and "international" in importance.

No Smoking, Please

Because of a growing number of complaints, members of the college community and visitors who smoke are reminded that a smoking policy is in effect in all campus buildings. Smoking is permitted in designated areas only, and those who feel they must light-up are requested to be considerate of their non-smoking colleagues and peers.

Tracy joined the SUNY Plattsburgh faculty in 1970 as an instructor. She was promoted to assistant professor in 1974, to associate professor in 1979 and to full professor in 1983. She received the B.A. from Colby College in 1962, the M.A. from Brown University in 1964 and the Ph.D. from the University of Toronto in 1974—all in English. Besides composition and Renaissance literature, she has taught courses on the Gothic novel, exposi-

Tracy's first book, The Gothic Novel 1790-1830 (University Press of Kentucky), was published in 1981. It is considered a definitive work on the subject, one that was instrumental in making the Gothic field accessible to scholars who have since taken it up. Her second book, Higher Ground: A Memoir of Higgins Classical Institute (Down East Books), described as "a superior piece of non-fiction prose about a private academy in Maine," was published in 1988.

Her third, the novel Winter Hunger

(Goose Lane Editions), was published in 1990. It is an anthropological tale set in northern Canada that has been described as "strangely haunting" ... "a breath-taking novel of mythical proportions at once disquieting and compassionate, guaranteed to haunt the dreams and imagination of every reader." A second novel by Tracy, What Do Cowboys Like? is currently making the rounds of publishers.

A year ago, Tracy was invited to speak for the faculty at spring commencement exercises, and in 1989 she gave the principal address during the fall academic convocation ceremony.

Ninth Annual Spring Academic Convocation Set for Saturday

SUNY Plattsburgh's Spring Academic Convocation — its ninth annual celebration of student academic achievement — will be held Saturday (May 2) at 11 a.m. in the E. Glenn Giltz Auditorium in Hawkins Hall.

More than 100 awards for scholarship and academic excellence will be presented to students in all areas of study at the college, and one member of the faculty will be honored as recipient of the 1992 Phi Eta Sigma Distinguished Faculty Award. Phi Eta Sigma is the national honor society for freshmen, and its award is presented to recognize not only a specific faculty member's teaching effectiveness but also that teacher's concern for freshmen and outstanding contributions to the academic success of freshmen.

Senior David Kocsis, president of the college's chapter of Omicron Delta Kappa, the national leadership honorary society, and the recipient earlier this spring of ODK's Province I "Leader of the Year" award, will deliver the convocation address. Other program highlights include a musical performance by the college's Flute Choir.

A reception will be held following the program in the Hawkins Hall gymnasium. The convocation program and reception are open to the entire campus community.

Psi Chi, College's Psychology Honor Society, to Host Two-Day Regional Student Conference

The SUNY Plattsburgh chapter of Psi Chi, the honor society in psychology, in collaboration with the college's Department of Psychology, will host the 27th annual New York State Undergraduate Psychology Conference on Friday and Saturday (May 1-2).

The event, said Dr. Henry Morlock, professor of psychology, will mark the third time the "premier showcase of undergraduate talent in the northeast region of the U.S." will be held in Plattsburgh since its inception at SUNY Oswego in 1965.

Morlock said that about 100 students and faculty from many colleges and universities in New York, Vermont, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Connecticut will arrive on campus in time for a banquet scheduled for 6 p.m. in the Angell Center Centennial Room. That program will be highlighted by a address by Professor Robert Baron of Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, who is a well-known social and organizational psychologist and prominent as a researcher and author of texts in social and introductory psychology.

Throughout the day on Saturday, concurrent paper sessions will be held on the second floor of the Myers building where undergraduates will present their research, theoretical reviews and analyses. Panel presentations on graduate programs and career opportunities will round out the conference program.

The conference is being sponsored by College Auxiliary Services, the Redcay Endowment, the Alumni Association and the Student Association. More information is available from Morlock or from Dr. Jeanne Ryan or Mike Migdal (ext. 3076).

The call is out for nominations of candidates to receive honorary degrees from the State University of New York in the coming academic year and thereafter.

Any member of the college community may submit the names and credentials of persons they believe are deserving of the honor. Guidelines suggest that persons who have demonstrated an affiliation with the college have the best chance for approval.

Nominations, with supporting materials, should be forwarded to the President's Office, Room 109 in Hawkins Hall.

Booster Club to Honor All Cardinal Athletes at Annual Awards Picnic

The Cardinal Booster Club will honor students who represented the college in intercollegiate athletic competition during 1991-92 at a year-end picnic and recognition program to be held Wednesday (May 6) beginning at 4:30 p.m. at the Valcour Educational Conference Center Boat-house.

More than 150 men and women participated this academic year in one or more of 13 competitive sports programs available at the college.

Booster Club awards will be presented to 39 graduating seniors, and members of the college's 1992 NCAA Division III national championship hockey team will receive plaques signifying their achievement.

Two student-athletes — a man and a woman — will be recognized as SUNY Plattsburgh's "Athletes of the Year" for 1991-92. The recipients, nominated by their coaches, will be selected by a committee representing the Booster Club, the Physical Education, Athletics and Recreational Sports Department and the Student Association, which funds the intercollegiate athletic program here, on the basis of their performance both in the classroom and in sports competition.

The Cardinal Booster Club, which is affiliated with both the Alumni Association and the Plattsburgh College Foundation, is an organization of alumni, businesses, faculty and staff and other friends of the college who share a commitment to fostering excellence in intercollegiate athletics at SUNY Plattsburgh. The funds it generates from members' contributions support needs related to intercollegiate sports that cannot be met by other sources.

to the NCAA's Fund in his name.

Kmack, a 5'7" backcourt star from Potsdam, shot 52% (44-48) from behind the three-point stripe this season, tops in Division III. He also holds the schools record for the most 3-point baskets scored with 105.

Kmack, captain of the Cardinals for the past two years, is an honor student and presidential scholar.

Special Services Project Funded by U.S. Education for Third Year

The college has received a $296,738 grant from the U.S. Department of Education to fund its Special Services Project (SSP).

The grant covers the period from September 1 of this year through August 31 of 1993, and it represents the final installment in a three-year contract. According to Michele Little, director of the project, a new proposal to continue funding beyond the contract expiration date will be drafted in the near future.

SSP at SUNY Plattsburgh is designed to provide academic support and academic, career, and personal counseling and related services to "eligible students." Eligibility applies to those defined as "at risk" — the learning and physically disabled, first generation college-going students and those who meet strict financial criteria.

About 350 SUNY Plattsburgh students have been served by SSP during the past academic year. Project funds pay for staffing, tutoring services and program overhead costs.

Geography Students to Present Lake Champlain Study Results

Geography honor students Joseph Burt and Jonathan Lulu will give a presentation titled "North Country Residents' Perspectives of Lake Champlain" at 4:30 p.m. tomorrow (April 30) in the Alumni Conference Room (103) of Hawkins Hall.

The presentation by Burt, a junior from Warrensburg, and Lulu, a senior from Upper Montclair, N.J., will focus on the preliminary results of a mail survey taken among a random sample of 547 New York residents in a four-county area in the Lake Champlain Basin. The students have been working on the research project for more than five months in collaboration with Dr. Bryan Higgins, associate professor of geography at the college. The study was conducted under joint sponsorship of SUNY Plattsburgh and the New York Citizens Advisory Committee on Environmental Management of Lake Champlain.

The survey, thought to be the first ever taken to gauge attitudes or public policy preferences toward Lake Champlain, consisted of 35 questions dealing with issues such as water quality, recreation, the economic impact of Lake Champlain and the responsibilities of government. The findings eventually will be made available by the Citizens Advisory Committee to local elected officials and to the Lake Champlain Management Conference, with copies available for public inspection in community libraries.

Tomorrow's presentation is open to all and is being sponsored by the Plattsburgh chapter of Gamma Theta Upsilon, the international geography honor society.

Midwest Schools Shine in Forensic Nationals, but the 'Plattsburgh 3' Turn in Solid Effort

Midwestern institutions as expected dominated the National Forensic Championships held recently at Mankato (Minn.) State University, but SUNY Plattsburgh's public speaking team of three made a highly creditable showing.

According to Coach Albert Montanaro, associate professor of communication, Plattsburgh managed to take sixth in its division, finishing ahead of some fairly well-known schools, including Notre Dame, Penn State, the University of Pennsylvania, Villanova, Purdue, the U.S. Military Academy, the University of Chicago and Iowa State. Of more than 20 northeaster colleges and universities in the competition, only one—Seton Hall, which placed fourth—finished ahead of Plattsburgh.

Montanaro said that while Plattsburgh broke only one speaker into the final rounds of competition, the team came very close to breaking three additional slots. For example, he said Chris Holfester was the next to break in informative speaking, but missed by only one speaker point. Sue Zwick broke to the finals in persuasive speaking, but didn't advance beyond the quarter finals, finishing 22nd in the nation. Nearly 150 students were entered in that category.

Senior Art Exhibition

Adams, Church, Waller, Hasting to Receive Chancellor's Awards for Excellence in Teaching, Professional Service

faculty and professionals for outstanding service to the University.

Plattsburgh's 1992 Chancellor's Award winners were recommended by a campus selection committee, es-mosphere that is challenging yet supportive. He is an expert in fire, forest and wildlife ecology and he teaches courses in those areas and in plant ecology, field biology and dendrol-

The Office of State University Chancellor D. Bruce Johnstone announced late last week that Excellence in Teaching Awards will be conferred on Dr. Kenneth B. Adams, associate professor in the Center for Earth and Environmental Science, Dr. Nancy J. Church, associate professor of management and marketing, and Dr. Altina L. Waller, professor of history. Dr. Ann C. Hasting, associate vice president for student affairs, will receive the Chancellor's Award for Excellence in Professional Service.

The four will be recognized during spring commencement exercises on Saturday, May 16, and they will receive a commemorative medallion to be worn at formal academic ceremonies. This is the 20th anniversary year of the program, established to honor established by the Faculty Affairs Committee of the Faculty Senate and composed of students and faculty, and endorsed by President Charles O. Warren.

"Each of our Chancellor's Award recipients deserves not only our congratulations but also our gratitude for extraordinary service to our students and the college," said Warren. "They personify excellence and their performance enhances our college's reputation for quality. The selection committee carried out a difficult task in a thorough and thoughtful manner, and I want to acknowledge both the effort and the integrity of its members."

Dr. Adams, a member of the SUNY Plattsburgh faculty since 1981, is known for his ability to stimulate students and as a teacher who sets high standards but creates a learning atology. In the last 11 years, he has developed 10 different courses for students from freshman through the graduate level, and for the past seven years he has served as the coordinator of the Applied Environmental Science Program at the W.H. Miner Agricultural Research Institute at Chazy.

In research, Adams has been successful in acquiring more than $62,000 in scientific equipment to augment campus resources from public and private sources, and he has co-authored grants totaling nearly $100,000 for the study of acid rain and forest fire management, enabling students as well as faculty to participate in research on these problems in the Adirondacks. He served as project director in 1989 and again in 1990 of the National Science Foundation-funded "Young Scholars Program," which is an intensive summer educational program for 15 outstanding high school students who are assigned to a college faculty member and given an original research project to be conducted the following fall. Adams, who received the M.A. degree in biology from SUNY Plattsburgh in 1977, holds the Ph.D. in silviculture from the SUNY College of Environmental Science and Forestry.

The nomination of Dr. Church refers to her as a "caring, accessible and knowledgeable teacher" who encourages students to accept responsibility for their own positions and their actions and whose instructional techniques vary from the interactive lecture and experiential learning to bringing successful alumni and prominent business people to her classroom as guest speakers. A member of the Plattsburgh faculty since 1977, she has taught 10 different courses and has developed several others related to advertising, franchising, women in management and direct marketing. She founded the college's chapter of the American Marketing Association 13 years ago and continues to serve as its faculty advisor.

Church is the author of numerous books, papers and magazine and trade journal articles and she serves as a member of the editorial board for the Journal of Direct Marketing. In college service, she has been a member of the Plattsburgh College Foundation's Board of Directors and co-chair of the Foundation's Faculty-Staff Campaign; a member of the Advisory Board to the Economic Development and Technical Assistance Center; and a member of the faculty of the Center for the Study of Canada and of the Business Advisory Council. She is a past president of the Kiwanis Club of Plattsburgh; in 1988 she was selected as the Champlain Valley Business and Professional Women's "Woman of the Year;" and she was included in the 1990 volume of The World's Who's Who of Women. Church holds the Ph.D. in administration from Concordia University of Montreal.

Professor Waller is a demanding but fair and accessible teacher whose enthusiasm for history "is infectious" and who consistently involves her students in primary research in history. A member of the faculty since 1983, she is regarded also as a "role model for women of the historian-teacher-scholar in an area which has traditionally been male-dominated" and a strong supporter of "non-traditional adult learners." She has taught a wide variety of courses in U.S. history — from southern history and history of the American family to the American Revolution, the Civil War and New York history — and in women's studies, from the introductory level to the senior seminar.

Waller is an authority on "the politics of culture and feuding" and the author of two critically acclaimed books, Feud: Hatfields, McCoys and Social Change in Appalachia (1988, University of North Carolina Press), which is being used as a text in more than 20 colleges and universities, and Reverend Beecher and Mrs. Tilton: Sex and Class in Victorian America (1982, University of Massachusetts Press), and several articles and reviews. Her fellowships and honors include two in 1990-91 granted respectively by the American Council of Learned Societies and Berea College. She holds the Ph.D. from the University of Massachusetts.

Dr. Hasting is being recognized as "an extraordinarily dedicated professional" whose "accomplishments over the past 20 years have been exceptional" and who not only brings "innovation and flexibility to her performance (but) instills those qualities of excellence into the work" of colleagues. Appointed originally in 1972 as a member of the history department, Hasting assumed the post as assistant to the academic vice president the following year with responsibility for budgeting and monitoring new program development. She has held her current position for the past four years, with responsibility for programs available through the Career Life Planning Center and for Veterans Affairs, the Special Services Project, the EOP and Upward Bound programs and the Claude Clark Learning Center.

Hasting developed and implemented the college's Cooperative Education Program, which is now in its tenth year. The program has created literally hundreds of academically related work experiences for undergraduates, and its total funding by the federal government to date has exceeded $1 million. She has served on myriad college committees and is a three-term member of the Faculty Senate. Hasting holds the Ph.D. from St. Louis University.

Student Awards Program on Tap Tomorrow

The 12th Annual Student Recognition Awards Program will be held tomorrow (May 7) at 4 p.m. in the Angell College Center Ballroom.

The event is sponsored by the SUNY Plattsburgh Circle of Omicron Delta Kappa, the national leadership honor society for college men and women. ODK's objectives include giving "recognition and honor for meritorious leadership and service in extracurricular activities," promoting "outstanding scholarship" and encouraging "development of general campus citizenship."

William Laundry, director of campus life, will preside at the program and senior psychology major David Kocsis, president of ODK, will give welcoming remarks. Greetings will be offered by the Hon. Clyde Rabideau, mayor of the city of Plattsburgh, Robert Antonelli, president of the Student Association, and Dr. Eldridge W. Roark Jr., vice president for academic affairs and national president of ODK.

Fourteen students will be honored for community service; nearly 50 will be acknowledged for service to the college community; more than 30 will be recognized as outstanding members of fraternities and sororities, campus media, residence hall councils and for contributions to service and social action groups; and many more will receive "special achievement awards." The latter include students selected for inclusion in Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges, and several surprise awards, including the names of the recipients of the Student Association and Toni Bloom Memorial Scholarships, the SA's Outstanding Service Award and the ODK Outstanding Sophomore of 1991-92.

CAS Appropriation to Augment Budget for Student Payroll

The College Auxiliary Services Executive Committee has approved an appropriation of $127,500 as a supplement to SUNY Plattsburgh's 1992-93 budget for its student payroll.

The allocation will allow the college to continue staffing by students in the coming academic year in the Claude Clark Learning Center, in the computing laboratory, in media services, in Feinberg Library and at the Angell Center information desk. According to John Homburger, senior business officer, the CAS funds effectively will permit continuing access for students to these services. During a typical payroll period, he said, the facilities are staffed by between 185 and 190 student workers and tutors.

"Without the contribution from CAS," said Homburger, "we would have had to find the money in next year's operating budget, almost certainly in personal services, and that translates to between four and five faculty lines. In its response to the college's pending $1.2 million budget reduction in the fiscal year beginning July 1, Auxiliary Services virtually has preserved these primary services at their current levels for academic 1992-93."

Homburger pointed out that the appropriation became possible as a direct result of "outstanding negotiations" that led to the new, three-year food services contract with the Marriott Corporation. That process, he said, produced a one-time opportunity to augment existing student payrolls.

Cheryle Hogle, associate director of campus life and president of CAS, said the motion to approve the allocation was passed unanimously by the Executive Committee, which is composed of four students and four members of the faculty and staff. She concurred with Homburger that effective negotiations on the food service contract helped enormously, but added that the "very successful and profitable operation of the College Store, particularly in sales of soft goods," placed CAS in a position to provide the extra support.

The latest appropriation, Hogle said, will bring CAS funding for programs next year to a record $274,097. She noted, for example, that CAS support for the Clark Center totals $12,000 annually, and that the organization's funding for the popular President's Speakers Series has been increased next year from $15,000 to $17,500.

"We feel our support indicates clearly that Auxiliary Services is a vital part of this college community," said Hogle. "We're not state-funded nor do we receive direction from University Central Administration, but we're every inch SUNY Plattsburgh student, faculty and staff."

Homburger echoed her comments. "CAS may be a 'silent partner' in our enterprise but its impact on programs, services and our academic mission is profound. We can be thankful also for the excellent management and leadership we receive from (CAS Executive Director) Stanley Supinski and his staff."

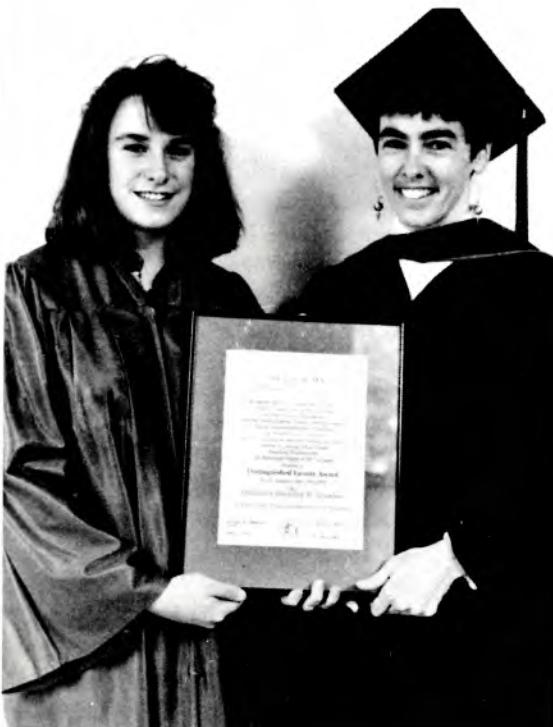

Women's Studies Program's Scanlon Receives Phi Eta Sigma's Distinguished Faculty Award

Dr. Jennifer Scanlon, assistant professor in the college's women's studies program, is the 1992 recipient of Hawkins Hall. It is presented annually by Phi Eta Sigma, the national honorary society for freshmen, to recognize the faculty member who, in the past year, has demonstrated teaching effectiveness in combination with concern for freshmen and outstanding contributions to the academic success of freshmen. Students who have been inducted to the society in the fall 1991 and spring 1992 semesters voted on the award.

A member of the faculty here since 1989, Scanlon teaches courses in both the women's studies program and the Department of History. She has taught previously at the Showa Women's Institute in Boston, at SUNY Binghamton, Massachusetts College of Pharmacy and at the University of Delaware.

Since joining the Plattsburgh faculty, Scanlon has given more than 15 invited lectures or presentations on topics related to gender issues on this and other campuses in the northeast and in Canada. With Drs. Mary Roark (Human Services) and Tony Poveda (Sociology) she authored the recently (Continued on back page)

More than 1,000 students will receive degrees during SUNY Plattsburgh's 102nd commencement exercises to be held Saturday (May 16) at the college Field House.

As usual, a full house is expected to witness the event, which gets underway at 11 a.m. President Charles O. Warren will preside at the ceremony.

The processional will feature Gabrielli's Canzon Duodecimi Toni I and Karg-Elert's March Triomphale, and these works will be performed by the College Brass Ensemble and Organ under the direction of Dr. Marshall Onofrio, assistant professor of music at the college.

The invocation will be delivered by the Rev. William G. Muench, pastor of John XXIII College Community, Plattsburgh.

The Madrigal Singers, directed by Dr. Edward Lundberg, visiting assistant professor of music, will sing The National Anthem and the college's Alma Mater. President Warren will recognize Dr. Ann B. Tracy, professor of English, named recently as one of ten faculty SUNY-wide to receive promotion to the University's highest rank, SUNY Distinguished Teaching Professor, and then present the University Chancellor's Awards for Excellence in Teaching and Professional Service.

Dr. Kenneth B. Adams, associate professor in the Center for Earth and Environmental Science, Dr. Nancy J. Church, associate professor of marketing, and Dr. Altina Waller, profes-

Osborn Chosen to Participate in Prestigious Workshop

Sculptor Don Osborn, professor of art, has been selected to attend ART/OMI, a new, three-week international artists' workshop to be held this summer in the northern Hudson River Valley village of Omi.

The program, scheduled from July 7 to 26, is designed to provide a setting where "outstanding professional artists" in varied disciplines can work and interact with their peers. Osborn will be part of a workshop group of 20 artists from seven different countries whose applications were judged superior by an admissions review committee and whose participation, in the opinion of the committee, "will advance a spirit of exploration and camaraderie."

Professor Osborn

His application, explained Osborn, who specializes in metal sculpture, consisted of a statement of his artistic ideas, philosophy and concerns, accompanied by six slides depicting his work. He is looking forward to the experience not only as a chance to work side-by-side with fellow artists from the U.S. and abroad. He sees it also as a means to meet and discuss his work with prominent critics in-residence and well-known visiting artists and established art dealers and gallery curators from nearby New York City ... "the art capital of the world."

"The benefits of this opportunity will be ongoing," said Osborn, whose best-known work locally is the monumental sculpture Thoughts on Phidias that occupies a prime spot on campus on the lawn area facing Broad Street, near the Kehoe, Yokum and Beaumont buildings. "It will give visibility to this college and its excellent art faculty and resources, and I am hopeful it will contribute significantly to my growth and development as teacher and artist."

ART/OMI, which is funded by a variety of sources, primarily individuals and institutions throughout the world, is set on 15 acres of rural farmland, and its facilities include a large, modern barn with ample space for

Council for International Initiatives Readies Release of Plan

SUNY Plattsburgh's Council for International Initiatives is wrapping up a productive year of operation and will soon issue its plan for internationalizing the campus during the remainder of the 1990s and into the 21st century.

According to Dr. Jeanne Kissner, director for international initiatives and chairperson of the Council, the plan is in final draft form and is being reviewed by that 25-member, all-college group. She expects it will be available in the Office of the President by the end of this month.

The plan, Kissner said, focuses on six interrelated areas that comprise "a coordinated plan for internationalizing the campus." They include courses available in international relations, area studies, study abroad opportunities, foreign language studies, the foreign student presence on campus, and current international activities.

painting and several sheds suitable for large sculpture. Painting and sculpture will be emphasized during the workshop, but, Osborn said, other media — video, photography and other new genres — will be included. Near the end of the workshop, a day will be set aside for the public to view the works of participating artists.

Osborn's participation in ART/OMI compounds an already busy summer for the artist. Shortly after his return to campus, an exhibition of his work — large sculptures created during the past year, particularly during a productive sabbatic leave last fall — will open in the Myers Fine Arts building.

Osborn, who holds the M.F.A. from Wichita State University, has been a member of the SUNY Plattsburgh faculty since 1985. He taught previously at Arkansas State University and Bethany College. His sculpture has been exhibited in all parts of the United States and is included in several permanent collections.

"Our Council, which includes a 12-member student component, has worked all year to develop this plan," said Kissner. "Besides examining what SUNY Plattsburgh has now, Council members have studied international programs available at 80 other colleges and universities. We have also developed a 200-item bibliography on international subjects that is available now in the president's office."

Recently, Kissner added, the group brought to campus George Jaeger, executive vice president of the international consulting firm of Kent Associates, Ltd. While here, Jaeger, a former American Foreign Service officer whose firm specializes in international relations and the creation of synergisms between American and foreign interests, met twice with the Council, with the college's General Education Committee, with faculty in the Department of Foreign Languages and Literature, and with individual students, faculty and staff.

Kissner said the Council is counting on a strong response to a questionnaire circulated recently to faculty and staff that asks for information with which to originate a "SUNY Plattsburgh International Directory." The brief questionnaire asks respondents to list their proficiency in reading, writing and speaking foreign languages, in which countries they have direct personal or professional experience or expertise, and personal or professional contacts they may have in other countries and their contacts' noteworthy fields of interest.

Levitin Receives Columbia University Translation Center Award for Translation of deAndrade Work

Dr. Alexis Levitin, professor of English, has received the Columbia University Translation Center's 1992 Fernando Pessoa Portuguese Translation Award for his translation of Portuguese poet Eugenio de Andrade's Slopes of Grass.

The award, which includes a $2,500 cash prize, is the second for Levitin for this particular work, scheduled for publication soon by Apalachee Press. Earlier, his manuscript of the translation of Slopes of Grass won a $1,000 grant from the Wheatland Foundation.

Levitin, who is on leave of absence during academic 1991-92, recently returned from Portugal where he has been completing work on The Collected Poems of Eugenio de Andrade and on an Anthology of 20th Century Portuguese Poetry under a grant from the Calouste Gulbenkian Foundation. Slopes of Grass is Levitin's fourth book of de Andrade translations, following Inhabited Heart (1985), White on White (1987) and Memory of Another River (1989). Many of his translations have appeared in literary magazines, most recently in New Orleans Review, The Poetry Miscellany, Graham House Review and The International Poetry Review.

The latest award is not the first Levitin has received from Columbia's Translation Center. In 1984 his translations of short stories by another author, Clarice Lispector, earned him the Center's Van de Bovenkamp-Armand C. Erpf International Award.

Levitin's translations have appeared in more than 100 literary magazines and in a score of anthologies, including the recently released Women's Writing in Latin America.

Kennedy, Duran Earn Booster Club's Athlete of the Year Honors

An All-America runner and the captain of SUNY Plattsburgh's NCAA Division III national championship hockey team have been named as the college's "Athletes of the Year" for 1991-92.

Seniors Suzanne Kennedy of Huntington and Jim Duran of Woburn,

The Cardinal Booster Club's Athletes of the year for 1991-92 are track All-America Suzanne Kennedy and Cardinal hockey Captain Jim Duran. They were honored last Thursday at the Booster Club's annual picnic for all student-athletes held at the Valcour Conference Center Boathouse.

Mass. were honored as the college's top sports performers at a year-end picnic and recognition program for all Cardinal athletes held last Wednesday at the Valcour Educational Conference Center Boathouse. The annual picnic and awards program are sponsored by the Plattsburgh State Cardinal Booster Club.

A senior microbiology major, Kennedy was a three year cross-country and two year indoor and outdoor track participant. In her sophomore year (1990) she was an outdoor track state champion in the 5000 meter run. She did not compete in her junior year for academic reasons, but burst onto the scene again this past year, placing first in several regular season

At the indoor track SUNYAC Championships, Kennedy placed second in the 1000 and 1500 meter runs and was a member of the winning 4 X 800 meter relay team. She was an ECAC champion in the 1000 meter and ran a leg of the second place 4 X 800 meter relay team at the New York State Women's Collegiate Athletic Association state championship. She culminated her career by placing fourth at the Division III Indoor Track National Championships held in March at the University of Wisconsin-Stevens Point. Her personal best time of 4:40.53 enabled her to achieve the goal of becoming a track and field All-American.

Academically, Kennedy is a member of Sigma Xi scientific research honor society. She received the Fitzpatrick Scholarship to attend Miner Institute last year and was inducted into Omicron Delta Kappa and is listed in Who's Who Among Students in American Colleges and Universities. A four year recipient of the Hudson Science Scholarship, she has been accepted into the Ph.D. program in microbiology and immunology at the Medical College of Virginia and has received a fellowship to study there.

Duran is an individualized major whose specialization is recreation. During his four years at Plattsburgh State, he was a leader on Cardinal hockey teams that won two SUNYAC Championships, an ECAC West title, an NCAA Eastern Regional title and the 1992 NCAA Division III National title. In his junior year, he suffered a career threatening injury and was forced to sit out the entire second half of the season; however, he assumed a bench role during games, becoming a motivational leader to his teammates.

A two year captain, Duran's leadership helped the coaching staff turn the hockey program into one with a strong work ethic and strict discipline on the ice, in the classroom and in the community. His community involvement includes the coordination of speaking engagements at local schools and service organizations. In his four years as a Cardinal he played 104 games and scored 55 goals and 77 assists for a total of 132 points, ranking him among the top 15 leading scorers in Cardinal hockey history. In 1992, he finished third on the team in points (61), 4th in SUNYAC scoring (just three points away from the top scoring position) and earned All-SUNYAC and ECAC All-Star post-season honors. Like Kennedy, Duran is listed in Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities.

SUNY Plattsburgh's Athletes of the Year are selected by a committee representing the Booster Club, the Physical Education, Athletics and Recreational Sports Department and the Student Association. Candidates are screened on the basis of their performance academically as well as in sports competition.

College Gets $5,000 Grant from GTE to Fund Forum Series

SUNY Plattsburgh has received a $5,000 grant from the GTE Leadership Program to support a series of four forums related to the topic, "Technology, Ethics, Environment: Connecting the Local to the Global." Dr. Ingrun Lafleur, associate vice president for academic affairs, is project director.

The forums, to be held during the 1992-93 academic year and sponsored jointly by the college and Clinton Community College, will involve presentations by guest experts having national perspectives followed by responses by panels of students, faculty and civic leaders. The focus of the presentations will range from agriculture and environment, medical ethics and gender issues to democratic science and technological policy making.

Committee Seeking to Establish Phi Kappa Phi Chapter Here

A college organizing committee to establish a local chapter of Phi Kappa Phi, the national honor society, has completed its membership petition and will bring to campus a two-person regional team representing the society to evaluate its eligibility to create a chapter here.

According to Mark Kaiser, lecturer in accounting and co-chair of the organizing committee, Dr. Arland Meade, Phi Kappa Phi's vice president, northeastern region, and Dr. Paul Bayless, director of fellowships, will visit the campus on May 21-22.

The primary objective of the society, created in 1897 and consisting of 244 chapters in 49 states and in the District of Columbia, the Philippines and Puerto Rico, is the recognition and encouragement of superior scholarship in all disciplines.

Membership is possible for undergraduates who are seniors and who scholastically in the upper 10 percent of their class; to graduate students, provided their number doesn't exceed 10 percent of the number of candidates for graduate degrees during a given academic year, and faculty and alumni who have achieved "scholarly distinction."

Besides Kaiser, the campus organizing committee is composed of Professional Studies Dean, Virginia Barker, Elizabeth Bogucki, Dr. Jane Gore, Dr. Carrie Harris, Arts and Science Dean Hsiung Liu, Dr. Rachel Pollow, Dr. Mary Roark, its co-chair, President Charles O. Warren, and Dr. Edward Worthen. Vice Presidents Thomas Moran and Eldridge W. Roark Jr. are ex-officio members of the group.

SUNY Plattsburgh's six SUNY Distinguished Teaching or Service Professors open the permanent display in their honor in Feinberg Library during ceremony held last Friday in that facility. The six, who hold the highest rank that can be attained in the University system, are (l-r) Dr. Stuart Baum, professor of chemistry (teaching), Dr. Edgar Barton (teaching), professor emeritus of art, Dr. Ann Tracy (teaching), professor of English, Dr. James Dawson (service), professor in the Center for Earth and Environmental Science, Dr. Prem Gandhi (service), dean of the School of Business and Economics, and Dr. Mark Cohen (teaching), professor of anthropology.

Ten members of the college's faculty and staff who retired during the past year were honored for their service to the college during a reception held last Wednesday in the Angell Center Blue Room. They included (l-r) Margaret McDevitt, cleaner (13 years), Dr. James McBraw, associate professor of biology (27 years) and Dr. James Mapstone, associate professor of sociology (21 years).

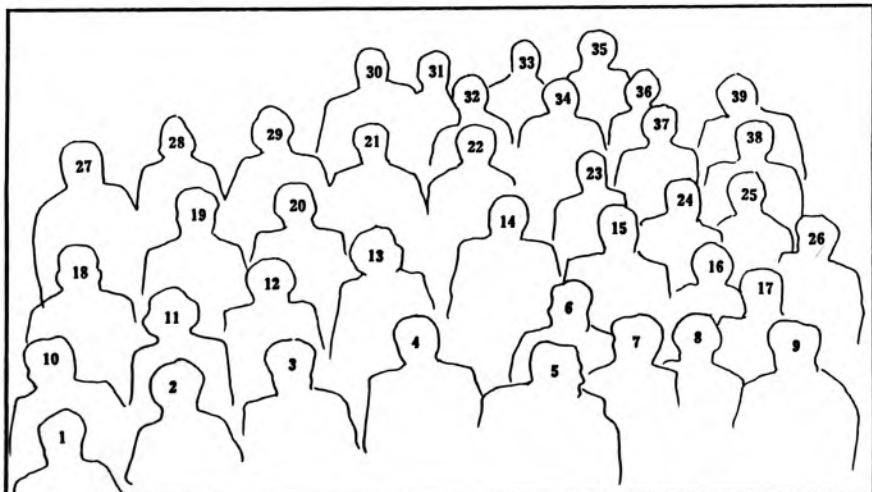

Ponderosa Restaurant of Plattsburgh has pledged an annual gift of $1,500 to the Plattsburgh College Foundation to provide scholarship aid to hotel restaurant management majors. Funds may be used also to purchase equipment supporting the program. The first grant recipients, flanking Ponderosa owner Patrick Akey (center), are Walter St. Surin (second from left), a senior from Brooklyn, and Kusuma Hongfa (second from right), a junior from Camden. Also shown are Steve Frederick (left) and Joseph Bornstein, job developers with the college's Cooperative Education Program.

In the book, Angulo examines how Latin American writers use "magic realism" to elucidate different social problems. She discusses seminal works of this mode by canonical writers Alejo Carpentier and Gabriel Garcia Marquez and works by non-canonical writers such as Jose de la Cuadra, Demetrio Aguilera Malta and Alicia Yanez Cossio. On Cossio, Angulo has published an interview, a book review of her latest novel, La casa del sano placer, and the article "Ideologeme of 'Mestizaje' and Search

Menz and McDonald each will receive a monetary award of $2,000 which will be used to offset costs for the 1992-93 academic year.

Menz, a junior theatre major from Rochester, is a Presidential Scholar, a member of Phi Eta Sigma, Omicron Delta Kappa, Alpha Psi Omega and the College Theatre Association. Higgins Elected '92-93 Senate Chair; Wolosz is Vice Chair

Dr. Patricia Higgins, professor of anthropology, has been elected to chair the 1992-93 Faculty Senate. Higgins, who is also an associate of the Women's Studies Program, previously served on the Faculty Senate from 1979 to 1982 and again in 1988-89.

During her previous terms, she served as a member of the Senate's Executive Committee, the Undergraduate Studies Committee and the Faculty Affairs Committee. Last year, Higgins chaired the General Education committee.

Other Senate members elected to office during the organizational meeting held last Tuesday included: vice chair - Dr. Thomas Wolocz; secretary - Dr. Robert Keever; and members-at-large of the executive committee - Dr. John Myers and Dr. Howard Miller.

Senate Chairperson Higgins

Elected to chair the various Senate standing committees were: Resources and Planning - Edward Brohel; Academic Policies - Dr. Charles Simpson; Curricula and Programs - Patricia Hoffmann; Faculty Affairs - Dr. Raymond Guydosh; College Services - Leith Bardon; and General Education - Dr. John Myers.

Following the organizational meeting of the 1992-93 Senate, the 1991-92 Senate convened for its last meeting. Members passed a resolution congratulating the Cardinal hockey team for winning the NCAA Division II Championship.

The Senate passed three recommendations from the General Education Committee:

- changing wording regarding the Learning Skills component to specify that "students entering as freshmen must complete the Learning Skills requirements before the beginning of the sophomore year; transfer students must complete the Learning Skills requirements within two semesters of matriculation;"

- changing wording pertaining to English 101 to read that the course will require "extensive practice in writing and revision in order to help students develop the ability to write clear, effective English prose;" and

- changing the course review process for general education courses to a six-year rotating cycle.

Also approved was a resolution (amended) from the Academic Policies Committee which specifies that any course not taught for a period of six years will be deactivated and removed from the catalog.

The Senate also approved a resolution encouraging students to complete distributive courses prior to their junior year rather than requiring them to do so and defeated a motion to change the title of the category "Foreign Language and Culture."

through the mid-twentieth century. A portion of the Collection deals with areas of the Province of Quebec and the State of Vermont which are adjacent to Northern Clinton County. Materials are in a variety of formats including personal/business correspondence, diaries, journals, account books as well as some church and school records.

New York's Documentary Heritage Program (DHP) began on September 1, 1988 when Governor Cuomo signed the Documentary Heritage Law. This law provides support for archives, libraries, historical societies, and other programs that collect, hold, and make accessible historical records (other than government records). Project grants are available to strengthen historical records programs, arrange and describe records, encourage use, develop improved techniques and approaches to the management of historical records, and related activities.

Since the state budget has just been passed, it is uncertain when grant funds will be available locally. A full year from receipt of the funds will be allocated for completion of grant-funded activities.

Librarian Joseph Swinyer will direct project to complete processing of McLellan Collection

Murnane, O'Connor to Lead Foundation's '92 Business Drive

The College Foundation's Business Campaign, which usually raises about $100,000 for SUNY Plattsburgh's student aid program, kicked off last Fri-said Murnane and O'Connor, "is simple — to ensure that no SUNY Plattsburgh student is denied an education for lack of funding. To do that we need the help of many businesses."

Each business will receive a personal letter signed by Murnane and O'Connor and that effort will be followed by a personal contact from a campaign worker.

campaign is divided into 12 teams, each having a captain and from five to seven workers. The captains and the workers alike have at least five contacts.

The workers are encouraged to stress the importance of the institution to the region — educationally, economically and culturally. The campaign workers also point out that more than 25 percent (1,560) undergraduates served by the college reside in a three-county area, and that more than 4,400 graduates of the college live, work and educate their families in the area.

"We ask each contact to think for a moment what their gift means to a student who has had to face up to a 95 percent increase in tuition over the past two years," added Murnane and O'Connor.

day under the leadership of Plattsburgh business persons Patrick Murnane and Michael O'Connor.

Between 60 and 70 persons will personally contact 400 businesses in the immediate area of the college. "The goal of this year's campaign,"

Schofield Wins Scholarship to Attend Practicum

Robert Schofield, a junior political science major from Plattsburgh, has been awarded one of two national scholarships to attend the 13th Annual Parliamentary Practicum to be held from June 3-7 at the Marshall Wythe Law School at the College of William and Mary.

Schofield, who is executive vice president of the Student Association, was selected for the award by a scholarship committee of the American Institute of Parliamentarians that evaluated applicants on the basis of their academic average, their involvement in student government and their proven interest in parliamentary procedure. He was sponsored for the scholarship by Dr. Melvin Donaho, professor of communication and Governor of Region IV of the American Institute of Parliamentarians.

According to Donaho, the seminar Schofield will attend in historic Williamsburg, Va. will be staffed by faculty whose credentials read like "Who's Who" in parliamentary procedure. Three, he said, are experts on the topic and each has published a well-established book in the field.

Besides his current role with the Student Association, Schofield is a Freshman Experience program resident assistant; president of the Resident Staff Association; president of Alpha Sigma fraternity; and a member of Omicron Delta Kappa and Pi Sigma Alpha honor societies. Last spring he was selected as ODK's "outstanding sophomore."

Counseling Programs Given Three-Year CACREP Accreditation

SUNY Plattsburgh's three counseling programs — community counseling, school counseling and student affairs practice in higher education with a counseling emphasis — have been accredited through June 30, 1997 by the Council for Accreditation of Counseling and Related Educational Programs (CACREP).

Dr. Carrie Harris, director of the Center for Human Resources (which houses the counseling programs), expressed pleasure at the five-year accreditation. "The three programs," she said, "were initially accredited by CACREP in 1990 for a two-year period. The fact that we received the five-year accreditation this time indicates that all three are operating on an appropriate level and that the counseling faculty are providing an excellent educational experience to our students."

The mid-July arrival of the PHILADELPHIA, the Lake Champlain Maritime Museum's replica of the gun-

Smithsonian Institution and launched last August, will moor at the Valcour Center dock on July 16 for a nine-day visit. Valcour is one of twenty ports of call on PHILADELPHIA's inaugural summer-long tour of Lake Champlain, and while it is there its crew and interpreters of history will invite the public aboard, free of charge, to explore the vessel, to discuss history—particularly, the significance of the Battle of Valcour—and to learn about current issues facing Lake Champlain.

The gunboat may be boarded on July 17 from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m., on July 19 from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m., and July 20 to 24 from 11 a.m. to 7 p.m.

Other SummerFest events included a Dinner Theatre program at the Valcour Center Boathouse scheduled for Wednesday, July 15 through Sunday, July 18; a "Dog Days Arts" show and sale, sponsored by the Council on the Arts for Clinton County, at the facility's Carriage House set for Wednesday, July 15 through Saturday, July 25; "Adirondack Day," a celebration of the region's folklore, history, music and culture observing the Centennial Birthday of the Adirondack Park, on Sunday, July 19; an outdoor performance by The Unknown Blues Band on Thursday, July 23; and the Mayor's Cup Splash Dance at the Boathouse on Friday, July 24.

Tickets and reservations are required for the Dinner Theatre program, and there is a charge also for admission to the blues concert and Splash Dance event; otherwise, all other activities are free and open to all. Specific information may be obtained from CAS (564-2035) or the Council on the Arts for Clinton County (563-5222).

Trustees OK Changes to Parking Regulations

The SUNY Board of Trustees has approved amendments to the college's traffic and parking regulations that will increase fines for several types of violations. At the same time, the Trustees approved changes to the regulations that clarify parking area restrictions for faculty, staff and students.

The amendments, which originated with a college-wide committee, had been endorsed first by the SUNY Plattsburgh College Council. They will become effective at the beginning of the fall 1992 semester.

The changes will be distributed to students with fall semester bills and to faculty and staff when vehicle registration renewal notices are issued later this summer. They will appear also in the next revision of the Campus Handbook.

The amended regulations raise fines from $5 to $10 for parking violations for failure to "properly register" a vehicle or "properly display" a parking decal. They double, also to $10, for unauthorized use of a decal or parking permit; for parking in an unauthorized area or zone; for parking in areas other than designated parking areas; for overnight parking; and for infractions leading to vehicle

Career-Life Planning Center Receives 'Excellence' Award

The college's Career-Life Planning Center received an award for "excellence in programming" during the recent annual conference of the SUNY Career Development Organization.

The award, in the Media Presentations, Advertising and Publications category, recognizes a video program produced here titled "Modernization of the Dairy Farm: Opportunities for Employment." It was one of six presented by the organization from among nearly 25 entries submitted in the competition.

According to Steven Frederick, job development specialist in the Career-Life Planning Center, the video was developed to enhance the image of dairy farming—to portray it as a profession rather than menial labor. With the supply of quality farm labor decreasing, he said, the program was produced also as an educational tool directed at high school students and their guidance counselors and at college students.

"It should help high school students and counseling students to understand that quality employment exists on dairy farms," said Frederick, who with Barbara Hebert, student employment coordinator, coordinated the project, "and that, because of increased mechanization, a need exists for more highly trained employees. Meanwhile, computer operators are just as important to the industry as tractor operators, so dairy farming is depicted as a viable career option for college students."

Frederick said the video tape was developed over a two-week period during the past academic year by students in mass communication, and that 100 copies have been produced for distribution to high school counselors, college career counselors, Cornell Cooperative Education sites, and others.

Each copy costs $2.95. The local Cornell Cooperative Extension is selling the videos for $8 each, with proceeds benefiting regional 4-H program activities.

HONORED FOR SERVICE — The Rev. William G. Muench (l), who is ending an eight-year term of service as pastor of John XXIII College Community parish in Plattsburgh to do missionary work in South America, accepts congratulations from SUNY Plattsburgh President Charles O. Warren on receiving the college's "Presidential Award of Honor." The award was presented on May 16 during a luncheon following 102nd Spring Commencement Exercises at the college, where the Rev. Muench gave the invocation. The award citation reads: "In appreciation of your generosity of spirit and your openness and kindness towards everyone. Since 1984 you have served SUNY Plattsburgh's students with distinction—as their spiritual leader, their personal advisor and as their friend. You have established a remarkable rapport with not only the college's Catholic students, year-round parishioners at John XXIII College Community and other members of the college community with whom you have worked, but also with students and clergy of other faiths. You are admired and respected by all who have come to know you, and we wish you Godspeed as you respond to the call for missionary service."

Williams' Exhibit Opens July 18 in Norwich, Vt.

"Monument Valley, Utah," from The American Terrain, a collection of panoramic landscape photographs by Roger Arrandale Williams, professor of art at the college, which will open at the Montshire Museum of Science in Norwich, Vt. on July 18 and run through August 10. The exhibit, according to a museum announcement, "opens a window onto the natural world revealing stunning views of vast and rugged landscapes that would otherwise be impossible to capture." It covers a seven-year period when "Williams trekked across the United States, covering over 100,000 miles on his photographic odyssey." Williams teaches courses on studio photography and the history of the medium at SUNY Plattsburgh. His work has been exhibited in more than 100 galleries and museums in all parts of the U.S.

Slatkin Gift of Rodin Work 'Eve' Enriches Museum

The SUNY Plattsburgh Art Museum has received a gift of 19th century French sculptor Auguste Rodin's plaster study of Eve, a piece the artist originally intended (along with his famous, The Thinker) to be part of The Gates of Hell, his greatest project and most famous work. The donor is Mrs. Regina Slatkin of Essex and New York City, whose gifts to the college in recent years have included eight tapestries and bronze works by Renoir and Bonnard. According to Museum Director Edward Brohel, Eve is a "wonderful work of a great artist — one that leaves the viewer breathless." He expects it will become the centerpiece of a collection of 19th century art the college is developing. It is, he said, "artwork of the first rank ... that raises the artistic and professional level of the museum and the rest of its collection." The 30-inch sculpture, made of plaster, was created circa 1881 and is signed "A. Rodin" on its base. It is the smaller of two versions — Rodin fashioned Eve in both half- and full-life size — and, said Brohel, it is the smoother of the two in terms of modeling and stylized hair. Besides being a collector, Mrs. Slatkin is a recognized scholar in 19th century French art and a former art dealer. She and her late husband, Charles, were proprietors of the prestigious Charles E. Slatkin Art Gallery in New York City.

Hardly a 'Mickey Mouse' Experience

SUNY Plattsburgh seniors (L-R) Karen Lash, Susan Reichard and Tricia Fiorentino, shown here with the world's most famous animated character near Cinderella's Castle in the Magic Kingdom Park at Walt Disney World in Lake Buena Vista, Fla., were among nearly 1,000 students representing more than 260 colleges and universities who participated in the Disney World College Program this past spring. The three, placed at Disney through the college's Cooperative Education program, were involved in a semester-long, three-part living-learning-working experience at the resort. The "living experience" placed them in apartments with international students who were taking part in a cultural representative program; the "learning experience" consisted of 10 weekly business seminars taught by Disney managers; and the "working experience" placed them in entry-level jobs at the Magic Kingdom, Epcot Center, the Disney-MGM Studios Theme Park or resort areas where they became case members or worked in merchandise, attractions, custodial, hospitality, food services, lifeguard or transportation positions. Lash, an accounting major from Port Henry, and Reichard, a marketing major from Montrose, graduated in May, while Fiorentino, a business management major from Fairport, is scheduled to finish degree requirements this summer..

Five Projects Funded Under SUNY Faculty Grant Program

Two individual members of the SUNY Plattsburgh faculty and three others who represent as many different disciplines have received awards under the SUNY Faculty Grants for the Improvement of Undergraduate Instruction program.

Dr. George J. Flynn, professor of physics, has been awarded $2,482 to support his project titled "Laboratory Development of a Photography Based Physics Course" (see other item on Flynn, below).

The project, said Flynn, involves taking traditional physics laboratory experiments and recasting them in photography problems, showing the relationship between light, color and human vision. Flynn said he hopes the new course will interest non-science majors by presenting science to them "in a more comfortable manner."

Richard E. Salzman, professor of art, has received $2,282 to support his project titled "Using Computer Technology to Accelerate Creativity in Art."

Salzman's project will incorporate computer technology as a creative extension in design students' problem-solving activities in studio art. Among the benefits, according to the project description, is that students will be able to scan or digitize their art work so that it can be "reworked"

Among the changes in parking area restrictions:

- The Harrington Hall and infirmary building lots have been removed from the list of parking areas reserved for faculty and staff only. On-campus students will now have exclusive use of the Harrington lot, while commuter students will be allowed to park in the infirmary lot.

- The lot at 134 Court St., previously accessible to students, will now be restricted for use by faculty, staff and visitors.

The collaborative project is titled "Peer Review and Critique in Composition and Anthropology," and its funding totals $3,982. Co-directors are Dr. Richard Robbins, professor of anthropology, Ms. Patricia Hoffman, lecturer and writing program administrator in the School of Business and Economics, and Dr. Penelope Dugan, assistant professor of English.

The three are working this summer to develop a "Student Guide for Peer Review and Critique" which students may use to "effectively read, critique and revise a fellow student's essay," along with computer software that will permit users to work together, but at different times.

The project, said Robbins, combines a writing course, English 101, with a subject matter source, Anthropology 102. Students will take both courses at once and work collaboratively on assigned essays, following a step-by-step formula for reviewing and critiquing a partner's paper. Robbins said students will be graded on their own papers and for the critique of their partner's work.

Flynn Gets $35,000 Grant from NASA for Cosmic Dust Particle Research

Dr. George Flynn, professor of physics, has received a $35,000 grant from NASA for a project titled "Trace Element Abundance Measurement on Cosmic Dust Particles."

In his statement of overall project objectives, Flynn points out that many cosmic dust particles are heterogeneous, non-equilibrium aggregates with mineralogies and elemental abundances suggesting they are more primitive than any known meteorite. He will measure trace element abundances in the cosmic dust particles, and use them to:

- infer the temperature and composition of the formation region, constraining solar nebula evolution;
- define similarities and differences between the cosmic dust and known meteorite classes; and
- establish genetic relationships between different cosmic dust particles, constrain the peak temperature reached on atmospheric entry and thus the possible source(s) of the particles.

Flynn will use Synchrotron X-Ray

Fluorescence — the most sensitive, non-destructive trace element analysis technique now available — for the minor trace element analyses. Then the particles will be thin-sectioned and examined by Transmission Electron Microscopy to determine their mineralogy and structure.

A member of the Plattsburgh faculty since 1975, Flynn taught previously at Embry-Riddle Aeronautical University. He has conducted research on cosmic dust for many years at the Brookhaven National Laboratory under the auspices of NASA.

Flynn holds bachelor's and master's degrees from MIT. He earned the Ph.D. at Washington University.

Curtis E. Shipman, North Country banking executive, civic leader and president of the Plattsburgh College Foundation for the past six years, died of cancer on Saturday, July 4, at the CVPH Medical Center in Plattsburgh. He was 58.

Mr. Shipman, a native of Peru, was a graduate of Peru Central School and he served in the U.S. Army during the Korean Conflict. He began his career in finance as a debt collector for CIT Credit Corporation, then joined Marine Midland Bank where he was an assistant vice president from 1970 to 1981. He became president and chief executive officer of Keeseeville National Bank in 1981, and eight years later he became chairman of the board of that bank.

The late Curtis E. Shipman

Mr. Shipman was affiliated with the Plattsburgh College Foundation for several years before becoming its third president in 1986, succeeding the late E. Glenn Giltz. He had served previously for five years as the organization's vice president, and during that span he chaired its comprehensive annual giving program four times. Under his leadership, annual giving increased by 132 percent and Foundation scholarship assistance to students grew by 171 percent.

Educator, author, educational consultant and environmentalist Dr. John W. Nason will receive the honorary degree of Doctor of Humane Letters from the State University of New York during fall Academic Convocation exercises at SUNY Plattsburgh on Wednesday, Sept. 9.

Nason, of Keene, a retired college president who has been an informal advisor to the college's last two chief executives and to several other educational administrators in the North Country, will be the featured speaker at the convocation. — that have honored him previously in this manner.

Nason was proposed for the honorary degree by SUNY Plattsburgh, and the nomination was approved by the University's Board of Trustees. SUNY joins a long list of prestigious institutions — the University of Pennsylvania, Brandeis University, the College of Wooster, Hamilton College and the Johns Hopkins University among them

He taught philosophy and later served as chairman of the philosophy department and as assistant to the president at Swarthmore College from 1931 to 1940, then assumed the presidency of that college, a post he held for 13 years. He became president of the Foreign Policy Association in 1953, then returned to academic life in 1962 for an eight-year term as president of Carleton College. He later served as director of studies for the Association of Governing Boards (1973-75), as director of the Study of Foundation Trustees greater good of the community and society reflect Curtis Shipman's exemplary work ethic, high moral principles and humane values."

"In his long-term commitment to our College Foundation, Curt Shipman personified altruism and leadership by deeds and by example. With Curt at the helm, it was easy to attract the North Country's most capable, energetic and community-minded individuals to the Foundation's cause. He was never a student at SUNY Plattsburgh, but he made a tangible and lasting difference in the lives of past, current and future generations of our students."

"Curt had much to do with the success of private fund-raising at SUNY Plattsburgh, but he would always give the credit to others." — Don Garrant

"Curt Shipman was one of three College Foundation presidents it has been my pleasure to serve," said Don Garrant, the Foundation's executive director, "and he met the responsibility with uncommon dedication, remarkable vision, unparalleled initiative and unassuming modesty. Curt personally had much to do with the success of private fund-raising at SUNY Plattsburgh, especially the dramatic growth of its annual giving and endowment programs, but he would always give the credit to others."

"Everyone associated with the Foundation deeply admired Curt Shipman as a wonderful human being and a natural leader. We will treasure his memory, but he will be sorely missed."

In 1989 SUNY Plattsburgh conferred its Distinguished Service Award on Mr. Shipman. The award is the highest the institution is permitted to bestow, and it is presented by the College Council and the president of the college to honor persons "who have made lasting contributions to the college, community, state, nation and/or the international human community." Mr. Shipman was cited as a person who "by action and example (had) guided the development of the Foundation to its status as a leading asset of the college" and as one whose "... contributions to the college will endure for all time."

At the time of his death, Mr. Shipman was treasurer of the CVPH Medical Center Board of Directors. He previously served as a member of the hospital board's executive committee and as treasurer of its Capital Funds Campaign. He also served as president of the Plattsburgh and Clinton County Chamber of Commerce, as president of the Clinton County Area Development Corporation and as a member of the Peru Volunteer Fire Department.

Survivors include his wife, the former Carolyn McGee, whom he married in May of 1955, a brother, Robert, of Peru, and several nieces and nephews. Memorial donations may be made to the College Foundation's Curtis E. Shipman Scholarship Endowment Fund.

Adams, Baum Each Receive Support for Science Projects

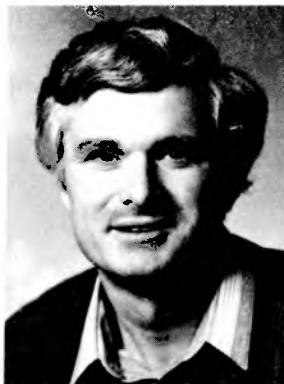

Two members of the arts and science faculty at SUNY Plattsburgh have received grants totaling $36,500 each from the New York State Education Department to conduct one-year outreach programs in science for North Country elementary and high school students and teachers.

The two are Dr. Kenneth Adams, associate professor in the college's Center for Earth and Environmental Science, and Dr. Stuart J. Baum, professor of chemistry, and their projects, respectively, are titled "Collaborative Science Education for the North Country" and "Hands-On Workshop." Funding for both was effective July 1 and continues through June 30 of next year.

Adams' project is designed to improve high school students' understanding and skills in science and mathematics by stimulating their interest in those subjects, increasing their scientific literacy and demonstrating interrelationships between science and society. The four-phase program, initiated this summer, unites highly motivated students with high school and college science teachers in a special collaborative approach to learning and doing science.

Baum's grant supports two summer workshops that focus on the enhancement of teachers' skills, knowledge and confidence in teaching a "hands-on" physics curriculum and continuation of a science outreach program for regional elementary

The ongoing outreach program, funded previously by the National Science Foundation, revolves around a mobile scientific laboratory that visits area elementary and middle schools, providing opportunity for elementary students to take part in experiments and science projects.

This past spring, Adams was honored as a recipient of the SUNY Chancellor's Award for Excellence in Teaching. Baum is a SUNY Distinguished Teaching Professor — the

TAC, School of Business Get $64,000 for 'International Business' Program

The college's Technical Assistance Center (TAC) and its School of Business and Economics have received a grant of $64,000 from the U.S. Department of Education in support of a project titled "International Business Education at SUNY Plattsburgh."

The funding, for the period beginning this coming September 1 through August 31 of 1993, is for the second year of a two-year contract valued at more than $120,000. Project directors are Alan Lessler, director of TAC, and Dr. Prem Gandhi, SUNY Distinguished Service Professor and Dean of the School of Business and Economics.

The venture is comprised of eight separate components. They include integration of international business majors into the project, development of seminars on world trade topics, establishment of linkages with the college's Center for Canadian Studies and International Education, identification of student placement and internship sites in Canada and Latin America, initiation of a course at Plattsburgh Air Force Base, and recruitment of business persons to take part in classroom and world trade seminar activities.

Crary Foundation, respectively, and he has served as a Senator of the United Chapters of Phi Beta Kappa and of the Fulbright-Hays Committee on International Exchange.

The college's Child-Care Center reports limited openings in program groups for the fall semester. Parents of children of ages 18 months to 5 years should call the Center (ext. 2274) for more information.

N.Y. Times Travel Section Spotlights College's Art Museum

The SUNY Plattsburgh Art Museum is among four upstate New York museums that received feature treatment in the Travel Section of Sunday's (July 19) The New York Times.

The article, written by Laura Fortenbaugh, who discovered "a wealth of fine art and intriguing artifacts" on a recent tour of a region stretching from Utica northward through the Adirondacks to Plattsburgh, describes the college's Museum as "a strong institution"—one that over the past century "has been the recipient of a number of remarkable gifts, resulting in an art repository of depth and distinction."

Fortenbaugh writes that she came to the Museum with one goal in mind: "... to see works by the artist, adventurer, writer and activist Rockwell Kent," noting that the college houses the largest collection of work by Kent in the United States. She also lauds the Winkel Sculpture Court, the college's sculpture park, the Ackerman and Slatkin Collections, and SUNY Plattsburgh's "Museum Without Walls" program.

On the Winkel Court: "(It) is a beautiful two-story enclosed atrium ... (celebrating) the work of ... Nina Winkel, a German-born sculptor who worked in nearby Keene Valley. Among greenery and fountains are about 40 pieces (from a collection of 75 major sculptures and 320 assorted works.) The figures are mythical or earth-bound, classical or expressionistic—and sometimes all of these—in a great variety of materials. The walls ... display tapestries by Roy Lichtenstein, Ellsworth Kelly and other contemporary artists."

On the sculpture park: "A highlight ... is the Adirondack Guide Monument by L. Brower Hatcher. This airy, massive two-story head, rendered in cables, contains objects of the guide's experience: cabin, fish, guide boat, bear, snowshoe, in a swirling postmodern evocation of one of the region's most enduring symbols."

DOB Sets SUNY Target Minimum at 500

75 Here Meet Eligibility Requirements for Early Retirement

Seventy-five members of two of three employee retirement program options have been contacted by mail and asked to consider an incentive for early retirement signed into law recently by Governor Cuomo.

Letters have been sent to the 75 — 13 members of the Teachers' Retirement System (TRS) and 62 in the Optional Retirement Program (TIAA-CREF) — under the signatures of campus administrators and United University Professions' officials. The letters address the complex nature of the incentive and the context in which it is being offered.

According to Robert Tabor, senior personnel associate, the incentive is being offered conditionally. Unless a minimum of 500 faculty and staff in SUNY choose to participate, the legislation dictates that the incentive be withdrawn. Those who choose the incentive must notify the campus personnel office of that intent by October 15. SUNY will then file a report with the Division of the Budget.

If DOB determines that the University has reached its retiree target, the notices filed in October become irrevocable. If the target is not reached, the notices may be withdrawn. Faculty and staff who retire with the incentive must leave SUNY service no later than January 15, 1993.

Eligible employees must meet one of two criteria. They must:

- be a Tier I or II member of TRS or TIAA-CREF, at least 55 years of age, who last joined the retirement system prior to July 27, 1976 and who has completed a minimum of five consecutive years of service; or
- be a Tier III or IV member of either retirement option, at least 62 years of age, who last joined the retirements system after July 27, 1976 and who has at least 15 consecutive years of service on an annual salary basis.

The incentives, Tabor explained, differ for eligible members of TRS or TIAA-CREF. He and his staff will welcome inquiries about the specifics.

The college administrators and union representatives who jointly signed the letters view the retirement incentive as one that provides individual retirees with "added benefits for their sustained and dedicated service" while affording the university and its campuses "additional budget flexibility in support of maintaining quality programs." They continue, "Because of the perceived possibility of an added financial loss to the state, DOB was reluctant to agree to this year's incentive plan and will probably be even more reluctant to agree to similar incentives in the near future."

There has been no action on a separate bill that would affect members of the Employees' Retirement System (ERS), whose membership includes primarily employees affiliated with CSEA and Council 82.

Work Begins to Repair Broken Water Lines; May Disturb Campus Neighbors

Work has begun to fix breaks in a section of the college's underground high-temperature water distribution lines. The breaks have created an emergency situation whose remedy could be disturbing to residents of the neighborhood bordering the north side of the campus.

Because of the breaks, said J. Derek Allan, director of facilities, seven college buildings (Kehoe, Hawkins Hall, Redcay Hall, Ward Hall, Beaumont Hall, Hudson Hall and Yokum Hall) are without hot water. The situation must be corrected by the time students return to campus in the fall.

The repair work, Allan said, involves excavation from Feinberg Library to Beaumont Hall. New concrete tunnels will be built to encase the pipeline and the existing pipeline will be abandoned in place. The contract for the project has been awarded to the mechanical contracting firm of H.L. La Plant of Plattsburgh, which submitted the low bid of $382,000.

Because the job must be completed before fall, contractors will have to work into the evening hours. Residents of some areas of

Draper Avenue, Park Avenue and Broad Street may face some intrusive noise during portions of the construction work.

To apprise local residents of the situation, a letter describing the problem and asking for understanding — signed jointly by Allan and by Don Garrant, assistant to the president for college relations and development — has been distributed to dwellings in the vicinity of the construction site.

Council Meets July 27

The SUNY Plattsburgh College Council will convene next at 3:30 p.m. on Monday, July 27, at the college's Educational Conference Center at Valcour. Council meetings are open to the public.

Besides routine reports, action items include naming of a conference room in a campus building and the appointment of a Council member to the Board of Directors of the University-wide Association of College Trustees. Also, varied health-related initiatives underway on campus will be discussed.

Osborn's Exhibit Allegories Opens August 7 in Myers

Allegories, an exhibit of five major works by sculptor Don Osborn, professor of art, will open in the SUNY Plattsburgh Art Museum's Myers Fine Arts Gallery on Friday, August 7 and continue through Sunday, September 20.

Professor Osborn

An reception for the artist will be held in the Myers Gallery Lounge from 5 to 7 p.m. on the day of the opening. The exhibit and reception are open to all.

Osborn's sculptures, in steel, range from a height of 12 feet to a diameter of 24 feet. According to the artist, the work represents his recent, evolving interest in "the mysteries of visual form and language." He writes,

"Choosing titles was becoming a more meaningful part of the creative process. I wanted the work to engage the viewer's imagination, conscience and awareness. Unlike past efforts, the intention and concept was to remain in the forefront and evoke certain mental states, moods and conditions that could mutate into allusions and metaphors."

Gallery Director Edward Brohel comments, "This show marks a new authority in Don Osborn's work. These five major pieces are a natural evolution of his expressive formalism of the past years, but they exhibit his concern with specific subjects, viewer inclusion and moral themes. Rather than dispersing the energy and impact of these sculptural experiences, the new themes seem to draw the viewer into a physical and discursive dialogue with the sculptor."

ronment" at the college of the Jeffords Steel and Engineering Co. of Plattsburgh. The firm's material and technical support of Osborn have not only permitted "a quantum change in his work," they say, but its gifts of materials and contact with industrial processes have given the college's students "opportunity to expand their potential."

Osborn is currently participating by invitation in ART/OMI, a new, three-week international artists' workshop being held through July 27 in the northern Hudson River Valley village of Omi. The program, funded by a variety of sources, primarily individuals and institutions throughout the world, is designed to provide a setting where "outstanding professional artists" in varied disciplines can work and interact with their peers.

The SUNY Plattsburgh artist is part of a workshop group of 20 artists from seven different countries whose applications were judged superior by an admissions review committee and whose participation, in the opinion of the committee, "will advance a spirit of exploration and camaraderie."
